CERMAK 'NEAR LOSING FIGHT'

CHINESE FIGHT JEHOL INVASION; 600 ARE SLAIN

Japanese Bomb City from the Air.

BULLETIN.

PEIPING, China, Feb. 23 (Thursday).—(AP)—A Chinese communique today said Nanling, Peipiao, and Chaoyang, all in Jehol province, were bombed by Japanese airplanes. All three places, the announcement said, were still held by Chinese forces. Postal and telegraph offices in Nanling and Peipiao were destroyed, the communique said. An attempt to bomb the postoffice in Chaoyang was frustrated by Chinese anti-aircraft fire, the bulletin asserted.

PEIPING, China, Feb. 22.—The Japanese push into snow covered Jehol from Manchuria met with fierce resistance today at Nanling, according to reports from Gen. Tung Fu-ling, Chinese commander at Chaoyang. Three hundred Japanese and 300 Chinese were killed in the engagement, the message said.

About 4,000 Japanese troops participated in the attack, which was preceded by an intensive bombing from the air.

Dispatches from Japanese agencies told of the capture of the railway terminus of Peipiao. This would give the Japanese forces control of the railroad from Chinchow, Manchuria, to Peipiao and would provide them with an excellent base for their proposed drive on Chengteh [Jehol City] the capital of the province.

Big Drive Opens Tomorrow.

Japanese officials meanwhile keep insisting that the major offensive will not get under way in Jehol until Friday.

Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, commander of the North China forces, with headquarters here, issued an official denial that the Japanese had taken Nanling. It was admitted that the Nipponese were in possession of the railway station, but the Chinese pointed out that the station is some distance from the city.

When the Japanese under Gen Yoshimichi Suzuki occupied Peipiao they found the town deserted, according to Japanese reports. A railroad tunnel and a bridge had been blown up in futile attempts to block the Japanese advance, it was said.

Expect Slow Progress.

Progress, however, is bound to be comparatively slow, it is pointed out, because all roads in Jehol are ice covered, the weather is very cold, and snow lies several feet deep in most of the province.

Meanwhile Chinese irregulars and Mongolians launched a counter offensive at the town of Tungliao, Manchuria, about 200 miles north of Chinchow, and at Koupangtzu, also in Manchuria. Japanese airplanes came to the aid of the garrison at Tungliao and together they succeeded in repulsing the attackers. Many casualties were reported.

Another clash occurred at Kailu, in northeastern Jehol, where the way is being prepared for an influx of additional Japanese troops from the north.

Chinese Form New Lines.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Feb. 23.—[Thursday.]—The 170th division of Gen Tang Yu-lin, governor of Jehol province, which withdrew from the Peipiao area as far as Chaoyang yesterday, was continuing towards Lingyuan today. Strong Chinese positions, however, have been taken north of Chaoyang and at Yehpaishow, where Gen. Tang's 130th, 119th, and 116th divisions are stationed, and indications point to these forces moving on the Japanese within a few days.

It is understood that the Chinese are planning an air attack and are building landing fields at Jehol City, Chaoyang, and Kankow. According to a report by a Japanese observation pilot, 30 Chinese pursuit and bombing planes are stationed at Tungping, in China proper, south of the Great Wall. It is understood that three foreign pilots are on the training force.

Gen. Chang Hai-peng, former Manchurian bandit, and now commander of the Manchukuo troops invading Jehol, has transferred his headquarters to Tungliao. His troops have begun to advance toward Kailu, in northeastern Jehol. Gen. Chang has been designated by Japan to govern Jehol after the Chinese have been driven out.

It has been decided to withdraw all

SINKS AFTER SIGNING PAY FOR TEACHERS

Two Doctors Stay at Bedside.

BULLETIN.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 (Thursday).—Dr. Frank Jirka at 2:15 a. m. Chicago time issued a bulletin which stated: Mayor Cermak was sleeping lightly. His temperature was 98; his pulse 108; his respiration 20. His condition was unchanged since midnight.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 22.—Mayor Cermak was fighting tonight against the most serious sinking spell yet encountered in his difficult battle for life. The serious relapse came after a period of recovery in which he found strength and courage enough to affix his signature to a document that will make possible the early payment of tax anticipation warrants to Chicago school employés.

Aided by a nurse, he wrote his name on an order appointing George O. Dahlmann, chief clerk in the office of City Controller M. S. Szymczak, his proxy to sign tax anticipation warrants in $50 denominations, to a total amount of $4,723,000. The request for the appointment had been received in a telegram sent by the city controller to Mrs. Clara D. Beasley, the mayor's secretary, here.

May Supply Million Monday.

It is expected that the mayor's action will release $1,000,000 in warrants to school employés not later than next Monday.

A few hours after he signed his order the physicians who have been treating him for his bullet wound suffered when President Elect Roosevelt was fired on a week ago, announced that the mayor "had come close to losing his fight for life during the evening."

The usual 10 p. m. bulletin on the mayor's condition was withheld until midnight. It stated:

"Mayor Cermak's intestinal symptoms flared up during the evening, but in spite of the severity of the colon complication his circulatory state has been fairly satisfactory, except for a momentary upset about 7 p. m.

"The mayor's pulse is 108, respiration 28, and his temperature 99.8. At midnight his condition was more hopeful than it appeared a few hours previously."

Near Death at Midnight.

Unofficially, the doctors said, Mayor Cermak has never come so near to death as he was during the early hours of the night. The medical staff was constantly in his room and only evasive reports were given on his condition, which took a sudden turn for the worse after he had signed the warrant proxy order.

Despite the slightly hopeful tone of the latest bulletin, it was said that constant precautions would be taken to aid him through the night. Dr. J. W. Snyder, who has been with him for a week, and the mayor's son-in-law, Dr. Frank Jirka, announced they would remain at his bedside all night. This is the first time such a close vigil has been maintained.

Earlier the physicians frankly had admitted their concern, although the mayor passed a comparatively restful day. The intense pains which tortured him for several days were abated late in the day by the use of drugs. It is not exaggerating to say that the physicians were in a state of alarm during the evening.

Glad to Aid Teachers.

Dr. Karl Meyer, medical warden of the Cook county hospital in Chicago, described what had occurred when the mayor signed to aid the Chicago teachers. Some dimculty was experienced by Ald. James Bowler and the nurse in making him understand what was wanted. When he did understand he scrawled his name feebly, his hand held by the nurse. When it was written he relaxed and murmured:

"It makes me feel good to do this. I wish it were for three months' salaries instead of this little bit."

Dr. Meyer had disapproved of the signing on the ground that it might have an unfavorable effect on Mr. Cermak's condition.

During the day there were fluctuations in Mayor Cermak's temperature and pulse. Even before the sharp attack of the evening the physicians declared that it would be nearly two days before the colitis attack could be definitely brought under control.

BEGINNING THE LONG CLIMB

Miss Lenska, Opera Singer, Tries Suicide

Augusta Lenska, contralto opera singer, from 1924 to 1928 a member of the Chicago Civic Opera company, was taken to the Billings Memorial hospital last night suffering from body bruises received when she was struck by a street car in front of 1014 East 55th street and pinned beneath the front safety fender.

D. J. McTigue, motorman, asserted that she had leaped in front of his car in an evident attempt to end her life.

"I was traveling west in 55th street," said McTigue, "when she stepped off the curb. Suddenly she darted in front of the car. I put on the brakes hard, but couldn't avoid hitting her."

Miss Lenska was hurled heavily to the tracks. The front part of the car passed over her, but the car came to a stop before the trucks could crush her. She was pinned tightly under the grated safety catcher. Motorman McTigue and Conductor F. D. Riley could not extricate her, and it was necessary for firemen commanded by Battaliot Chief Thomas Logan to jack up the car to free her.

Admits Suicide Attempt.

At the hospital it was found that the contralto had apparently suffered no worse injuries than minor bruises. She appeared anxious to conceal her identity. To attendants Miss Lenska admitted that she had tried to end her life.

"I waited at the tracks from 6 o'clock to get enough courage to do this," she is reported to have said. "Earlier in the day I went to the lake—but the water was too cold."

Questioned by Sergt. Fred Webster of the Hyde Park station, Miss Lenska refused even to admit she was the opera singer. When asked for an explanation of her act, she shrugged her shoulders and replied simply:

"O, troubles, despair."

Recently a Choir Singer.

From their inquiry police concluded Miss Lenska's case was one of financial difficulties—and also the collapse of an operatic career. Once a familiar figure on European and American stages, she is now a choir singer. She is 51 years old and lives in a room at the Larkin apartments at 5540 Cornell avenue. She moved there eight weeks ago. Recently she has been singing in churches.

During the war, Miss Lenska was prima donna with the Teatro de la Monnaie at Brussels and with the Royal Opera. In 1924 she joined the Chicago Civic Opera company. She appeared dozens of times in her four year engagement, some of her rôles having been Azucena in "Il Trovatore," Amneris in "Aida," Ortrud in "Lohengrin," and Tibuda in "The Witch of Salem." A Jewess, she became a Catholic convert several years ago, and once was said to have considered becoming a nun.

SMASH SAFES AT LEWIS INSTITUTE, TERRORIZE GUARD

Four young gunmen took possession of the Lewis institute at 1951 Madison street for two and one-half hours last night and this morning, cracked open one safe, battered another, and dug into a wall vault. Police do not believe they got much of value. One of the burglars is believed to be a former student at the institute.

The chief sufferer of the crime was Neil Whiteford, 24 years old, of 2019 Monroe street, the watchman. He was held prisoner from 11 o'clock last night until 1:30 o'clock this morning, being menaced by a gun constantly.

Whiteford was making his rounds at 11 p. m. when the burglars seized him. They marched him to the second floor offices. One guarded him, while the others, equipped with hammers, chisels, axes, crowbars, and pipe wrenches, worked on an old safe. They opened the outer door, but couldn't break the inner door.

PROTESTS 43 PAGE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD SPEECH

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Printing in the Congressional Record of a 43 page speech on the league of nations by Senator Sheppard [Dem., Texas] was protested in the house today by Representative Underhill [Rep., Mass.]. Underhill said printing of the speech cost $1,200. It was delivered in the senate by Sheppard a week ago during a filibuster against the resolution submitting repeal of the 18th amendment, but was not printed until today's record.

John R. Fell, Kin of Drexel, Slain in Java

BATAVIA, Java, Feb. 22.—(AP)—John Fell, director of a Paris bank, was found dead today in a hotel here with a table knife in his breast. Circumstances of the death were not revealed. His wife, who was understood to be the only witness, became overexcited and could not be questioned immediately concerning the death.

Noted as Polo Player.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—(AP)—John R. Fell, socially prominent clubman and sportsman of Philadelphia and New York, who was reported found dead today in Java, left Marseilles, France, a month ago on a world tour in which Java was scheduled for a brief stop.

He was accompanied by his third wife, the former Miss Dorothy Ederton, an actress whom he married in January, 1932. His first wife, the former Miss Dorothy Randolph, whose marriage to Fell was dissolved by divorce, is now the wife of Ogden L. Mills, secretary of the treasury.

Fell was a noted polo player and horseman. He entered the world war as a private, later becoming an officer in the United States army quartermaster corps in France.

Grandson of A. J. Drexel.

He was born in Philadelphia in 1889, a son of the late Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer and her first husband, John R. Fell. He was educated by tutors and in private schools in this country and abroad. He was a grandson of the late Anthony J. Drexel, founder of the banking firm of Drexel & Co.

His career as a horseman took him to France, Germany, and England and in 1913 he entered Highbridge in the Grand National Steeplechase handicap at Liverpool.

Fell had three children by his first marriage, John R. Fell Jr. of New York and Philip S. P. Fell and Dorothy R. Fell, who live with their mother.

Companions of Kelley said he ran when the tree started to fall in his direction, but stumbled into a ditch and was struck by a branch when he attempted to arise. His neck was broken.

Paris Censors Debt Speech by U. S. Envoy

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 22.—Newspaper men who went to the annual Washington birthday banquet of the American club to hear Ambassador Walter E. Edge deliver what they knew from glimpses of advance copies to be one of the most sensational utterances on war debts ever made by an American diplomat tonight got a sensation they had not expected.

A straight from the shoulder warning to Europe that it is useless to think that America will revise the debts without serious compensations—which the correspondents had read in the confidential advance copies of the speech issued by the embassy here—was missing. Comparison of the ambassador's actual remarks with the written text showed that several hundred words, the whole backbone of the speech, had been deleted and replaced by innocuous generalities.

Speech Is Rewritten.

The speech, it is learned, was rewritten at the last moment as a result of various protests which had been made. The official explanation was that Edge thought the speech might be out of place in view of conversations yesterday between President Elect Roosevelt and Paul Claudel French ambassador to Washington.

A reliable French source reports that the ambassador was persuaded to change his address after former Premier Edouard Herriot, who was a guest of honor at the banquet and who had been shown an advance copy, declared he would not attend if the speech was delivered in that form. Herriot attended upon being informed that the speech would be changed.

Other members of the government who had been invited declined to attend on the pretext of illness or pressing business. They had been informed of Edge's proposed speech.

American Colony Protests.

The proposed speech had already leaked out to the American colony through advance copies and produced a regular tempest of protestation and alarm. It is understood on good authority, although the embassy denies it, that the president of the American club personally pleaded with Edge to revise the speech. He is understood to have told the ambassador:

"You are going away, so it doesn't make any difference to you, but the American club has to stay here, and if you make this speech it will ruin us."

Singling out France, Edge's speech, according to the original text, revealed that the French government had sold surplus American war stocks for more than the total debt payments under the funding agreement and that therefore if the debts, which included the purchase of war stocks, were canceled today, France would show a profit on the operations.

Refers to French Default.

Several passages farther on in the speech, which were likewise suppressed, dealt with the French default on Dec. 15. The speech pointedly warned that if the payment is put off much longer reaction in America would be very unfavorable.

One of the closing paragraphs in the suppressed part of the speech was to have read like this:

"Usually when a man owes an acknowledged debt and envisages that changed circumstances justify a revision, he approaches his creditor with a request that further consideration be given. In the case of some of our friends they propose to reverse the usual procedure and stipulate their own terms. They acknowledge the debt, but refuse to make the payment which is due until or unless the creditor reconsiders the transaction through a conference, the outcome of which is outlined by them in advance."

CAPITAL NOTES ABSENCE OF 'BIG' MEN IN CABINET

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Roosevelt cabinet was the talk of the town today. For publication the Democrats and Republican radicals who supported Roosevelt praised it as a strong board of official advisers. Privately not a few Democrats expressed disappointment in the selections. By such it was pronounced a mediocre cabinet.

A common comment was that the big men of the party are conspicuous for their absence from the cabinet. It was pointed out that outside of Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, who came into prominence in the oil scandal investigations, and James A. Farley of New York, who gained the limelight as Roosevelt campaign manager, none of the cabinet selections is nationally known.

Smith and Davis Missing.

Among the big men of the party missing from the cabinet are Al Smith, James M. Cox of Ohio, Democratic candidate for President in 1920; John W. Davis of New York, Democratic candidate for President in 1924; Owen D. Young of New York, Melvin A. Traylor of Illinois, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Bernard M. Baruch of New York, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, and Newton D. Baker of Ohio.

So far as is known Senator Glass is the only one of these Democrats of national prominence to whom Mr. Roosevelt gave the refusal of a place in his cabinet. Despite the assertions of Senator Glass that he rejected the treasury portfolio because he felt he could be more useful in the senate, there is increased reason to believe that his decision was due mainly to lack of confidence in the soundness of Mr. Roosevelt's position on monetary policies. Mr. Glass is said to have been unable to satisfy himself that Mr. Roosevelt sees eye to eye with him in opposition to inflation.

Report Johnson for Ickes.

The shadow of Sam Insull, fallen public utility magnate, was discerned athwart the cabinet selections. For weeks it had been whispered about that neither Mr. Young nor Mr. Traylor would be invited to take places in the cabinet because of the linking of their names with the Insull debacle. On the other hand, Harold L. Ickes of Chicago, chosen for secretary of the interior, has been an active foe of Insull for a decade or more.

That circumstance, however, probably had little to do with the selection of Mr. Ickes. More important was the fact that Mr. Ickes, who was a Bull Mooser, was strongly favored for a cabinet appointment by Senator Hiram Johnson of California and other Republican radicals who bolted President Hoover and actively supported Mr. Roosevelt.

The President elect is understood to have offered the interior portfolio to Senator Johnson several weeks ago as a reward for the powerful support the senator brought to the Democratic ticket in Mr. Hoover's home state. Mr. Johnson turned down the offer. He denies that he had anything to do with landing Mr. Ickes in the place, but thinks Mr. Roosevelt could not have done better. Mr. Ickes was in Washington today and Senator Johnson escorted him to an afternoon train for Chicago.

Boulder Dam appears to have been the touchstone of the interior department appointment. The Californians, by the nine gods, swore that they would tolerate no one at the head of the interior department who is not a warm friend of the Boulder dam project to supply domestic water and electric power to Los Angeles at an outlay of 165 million dollars by the federal government, not to mention 68½ millions advanced by the R. F. C. for the aqueducts and power transmission lines.

The Californians were in the seventh heaven when they heard that President Elect Roosevelt wanted Senator Johnson for the place, the senator having been the skillful manipulator of the legislation to get Los Angeles a water supply financed by the federal treasury. They were dejected when he rejected the proffered appointment, and jolted almost out of their skins when they heard that Mr. Roosevelt contemplated giving the place to Gov. George Dern of Utah. Gov. Dern had stubbornly fought the Boulder dam project at one stage as unfavorable to the interests of Utah.

McAdoo Opposes Dern.

Senator William Gibbs McAdoo and other Los Angeles keymen are said to have told Mr. Roosevelt that Dern simply would not do as secretary of the interior. Give him any job but that, they ultimatumed. It is hard enough already, the Californians reflected, to get Boulder dam appropriations through congress without having a lukewarm secretary of the department under which the dam is being constructed.

The Californians made more trouble for the President elect over the interior portfolio than he experienced in connection with any other appointment. They finally got behind Ickes on the understanding that with regard to Boulder dam he is 100 per cent O. K. That Senator Johnson was back of Ickes was sufficient assurance, anyway, that the Chicagoan would be satisfactory on California's pet project. Mr. Ickes has been a close personal friend and political associate of Senator Johnson for a quarter of a century. He was prominently identified with the senator's aspiration to the presidency in 1920, and 1924.

Radicals Back Ickes.

The Republican radicals generally got in line for Ickes and pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Roosevelt to appoint him in recognition of their services to the Democratic ticket. Mr. Roosevelt finally yielded and switched Dern to the war department portfolio, to the great disappointment, 'tis gossiped, of Swager Sherley of Kentucky.

A story being told here today is that Mr. Roosevelt met Mr. Dern at an annual governors' conference some years ago. "George," said Roosevelt to Dern, when their friendship had ripened, "I am going to be President some day and you are going to be in my cabinet."

Henry A. Wallace of Iowa, who is to be secretary of agriculture, is a son of President Harding's secretary of agriculture who fell out with Harding's secretary of commerce, Herbert Hoover, when the latter sought to have the forest reserves taken away from the department of agriculture. Mr. Roosevelt's secretary of agriculture went Democratic in 1928, supporting Al Smith. He was a potent influence for Roosevelt in Iowa, a champion of the domestic allotment farm relief plan, a lower tariff, reciprocal trade agreements, and currency inflation.

Three Former Republicans.

Of the ten cabinet members, three—Woodin, Ickes, and Wallace—were formerly Republicans. Mr. Woodin, who will be secretary of the treasury, still lists himself as Republican, though he supported Smith and Roosevelt. Mr. Woodin is rated a sound money man, opposed to inflation.

To the influence of Senator McAdoo is attributed the selection of Daniel A. Roper for secretary of commerce. Mr. Roper was McAdoo campaign manager in the 1920 and 1924 conventions. Previously he had been internal revenue commissioner when Mr. McAdoo was secretary of the treasury. Senator Swanson, selected for secretary of the navy, is a strong navy man.

Miss Frances Perkins, New York state labor commissioner, will be the first woman to sit in a President's cabinet.

NEWS TO DIETERICH

Senator Elect William H. Dieterich, reached at Peoria last night, had this to say about the probable appointment of Harold Ickes as secretary of the interior:

"It is all news to me about Mr. Ickes' appointment. I have had several letters from him, but not about a cabinet position. I was not asked to recommend his appointment, but if I had been asked I believe I would have recommended him. I think he is a capable man for the position."

An attempt was made to reach Senator Lewis, but it was found he is on his way back to Washington.

Sketches of Those Completing Roosevelt Cabinet

Following are brief sketches of several of the persons authoritatively named as members of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet:

GEORGE H. DERN.

Mr. Dern was born on his father's farm in Nebraska 60 years ago. He was captain when the University of Nebraska captured the championship of the Missouri Valley conference in 1894.

Moving to Utah that year, he took up mining, becoming general manager of the largest gold mine in that state at Mercur. He twice was elected to the state senate.

He introduced and sponsored to successful passage workmen's compensation, corrupt practices, mineral leasing, blue sky and initiative and referendum laws.

He was elected governor in 1924, on both the Democratic and Progressive tickets, reelected in 1928. He met Franklin D. Roosevelt at a governors' conference.

He led a campaign for revision of Utah's tax system that resulted in adoption of a constitutional amendment and legislation to reduce the excessive burden on real property.

His incumbency as governor ended Jan. 1, 1933. He was chairman of the Colorado river conference of governors at Denver, and while at Washington he urged that waters of all western streams belonged to those states, not to the federal government.

Mr. Dern is a member of the Congregationalist church, a Masonic past grand master, and a 33d degree Scottish Rite Mason, a Knight Templar and a past potentate of the Mystic Shrine.

JAMES A. FARLEY.

Mr. Farley, weighing more than 200 pounds, is chairman of the Democratic national committee, also of the New York Democratic state committee and of the New York state athletic (boxing) commission. He is president of the General Builders' Supply company of New York. He does not drink or smoke, but chews gum. By letter and personal visits with politicians all over this country he had a great deal to do with Mr. Roosevelt's nomination for the presidency.

Mr. Farley was born on May 30, 1888, at Grassy Point, in Rockland county, N. Y., where his mother ran a grocery store. There he built up a Democratic organization modeled on Tammany Hall.

Alfred E. Smith appointed Mr. Farley port warden of New York City in 1918-'19 and in 1924 made him a member of the state athletic commission. He has been reappointed at two year intervals ever since. He was a delegate to the Democratic national conventions in New York City in 1924 and in Houston, Tex., in 1928, supporting Al Smith's fight for the presidential nomination on both occasions.

HAROLD L. ICKES.

Mr. Ickes, a native of Pennsylvania, obtained his A. B. and a law degree cum laude from the University of Chicago. He did newspaper work in this city. He took up law here in 1907. In 1911 he married Anna Wilmarth Thompson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Wilmarth, who were well known in Chicago society. He has four children, Mrs. Requa Bryant, Wilmarth, Raymond and Robert Ickes.

He was manager of the mayoralty campaign of John M. Harlan in 1905 and of Charles E. Merriam in 1911 and active in the Bull Moose campaign of Theodore Roosevelt in 1912. He also participated in the presidential campaigns of Charles E. Hughes in 1916 and Hiram W. Johnson in 1934, being manager of the latter's campaign in Illinois.

Mrs. Ickes is serving her second term in the Illinois legislature and was formerly a trustee of the University of Illinois. The 7th senatorial district includes suburbs and country towns on the outskirts of Chicago. The district makes a half circle around the city. Their home is at 900 South Private drive, Hubbard Woods.

FRANCES PERKINS.

Frances Perkins, who as secretary of labor will be the first woman member of a President's cabinet, was graduated from Mount Holyoke college in 1902.

She was recommended to Mr. Roosevelt by numerous civic and welfare leaders and women's groups.

She met Smith and Roosevelt in Albany when both were young assemblymen. She is state industrial commissioner of New York, so appointed by Roosevelt after appointment as a member by Gov. Smith in 1923. Gov. Lehman continued her in office.

She was born in Boston in 1882 of an old revolutionary family that included James Otis. Miss Perkins once taught in a girls' school at Lake Forest, Ill. She took up social service at the instance of Graham Taylor and Jane Addams of Chicago. For a time she was a resident of Hull house and has done social work in Philadelphia.

From 1917 to 1919 she was executive director of the New York Council of Organizations for War Service. She is married and has one daughter, but she retains her maiden name. Her husband is Paul Wilson.

DANIEL C. ROPER.

Wizardry at figures and facts steadily has helped Mr. Roper from the South Carolina house, which he entered at 35. He came to Washington as clerk of the senate interstate commerce committee. He then became an expert special agent of the census bureau.

There he attracted the attention of Oscar W. Underwood, then chairman of the house ways and means committee, who drafted Mr. Roper as clerk of that committee. Mr. Roper became an expert on tariff regulation.

Mr. Roper became first assistant postmaster general, then vice chairman of the tariff commission, and finally internal revenue commissioner. There he remained until the close of the Wilson régime. He is now in private practice as an income tax attorney.

He was born in South Carolina, April 1, 1887. He was graduated from Trinity college [now Duke university] and has a law degree from National university of Washington. He has five sons and two daughters. Mr. Roper is identified with the Methodist Episcopal church, South, being a trustee of Duke university and a member of the General Conference of the church in 1930. He was for years an ardent prohibitionist, but at the Chicago convention favored submission of the Eighteenth amendment to the people.

CLAUDE A. SWANSON.

There is no warmer friend of the navy in either house of congress than Senator Swanson of Virginia. When the United States was in the world war Mr. Swanson was chairman of the house naval affairs committee. He now is ranking Democrat of the similar senate committee and of the senate foreign relations committee. He has been closely identified with naval legislation for eighteen or twenty years, and was an American delegate to the Washington arms and London naval conferences.

Born 71 years ago in Swansonville, Va., the senator attended public schools until 16, taught school a year, and then went to Virginia Polytechnic institute. He did not have the money to continue his education so he became a clerk for two years and saved enough to graduate at Randolph-Macon college. He later got a law degree.

Mr. Swanson became well acquainted with Roosevelt when the latter was assistant secretary of the navy.

HENRY A. WALLACE.

Mr. Wallace is the third of his line to publish the farm paper, Wallace's Farmer. He will succeed to the same position in the cabinet once held by his father.

At 54 he has never held public office, but through his publication has become identified with the most advanced group of Republican independents. His advocacy of currency inflation is well known and he was one of the original promoters of the domestic allotment plan as a means of relieving agriculture.

Mr. Wallace's father was Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture under President Harding; his grandfather was "Uncle Henry" Wallace, a power in politics half a century ago and an intimate of Republican leaders of that day.

Mr. Wallace first entered the political lists in an active fashion during the Roosevelt campaign when he "stumped" Iowa and adjacent states in favor of Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy. He received the major credit for carrying Iowa, ordinarily a Republican stronghold, for the President elect.

THOMAS J. WALSH.

Walsh of Montana will carry with him the reputation of being the outstanding authority on constitutional law in the United States senate.

Elected to the United States senate in 1912, he became one of President Wilson's most trusted supporters and advisers.

In 1923 Senator Walsh assumed a conspicuous place in public attention as the "prosecutor" in the senatorial investigation of the leasing of the naval oil reserve in the Teapot Dome inquiry. It was as a result of his efforts that Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior in the Harding administration; Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair were indicted and tried, Fall being convicted and the others acquitted by juries. Mr. Walsh believes the states should control the formation of the conventions to ratify repeal of the 18th amendment.

Senator Walsh was born at Two Rivers, Wis., in 1859. He scraped up the money to make his way through the law school at the University of Wisconsin, practiced law in South Dakota, and went to Montana in 1890.

BARE UNSECURED LOANS TO BANK'S OWN OFFICERS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Unsecured loans of $2,366,000 by the National City bank to its own officers to enable them to cover open market commitments in the bank's stock, following the stock market collapse and the subsequent writing down and taking over of the loans by the National City company, were brought to light before the senate banking and currency committee on examination of Gordon S. Rentschler, the bank's president.

A fund of $2,000,000 was established by the bank on Nov. 13, 1929, within a fortnight after the stock market crash, Mr. Rentschler told the committee, for the purpose of making unsecured loans to the bank's officers without interest to "sustain the morale of the organization and to protect the officers in the existing emergency."

Not more than 5 per cent of these loans had been repaid to the bank, some having been charged against its undivided profits accounts and the remainder written down and transferred to the National City company, its investment affiliate, said Mr. Rentschler. He said the fund had been first suggested either by himself or by Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the board of both institutions, in the belief that it was essential to the welfare of the organization that its officers be protected during the period of financial stress.

CONGRESS GIVEN BILL TO GUIDE SILVER PRICES

Surplus Bought by U. S. Will Be Sold.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The so-called Somers silver purchase bill, providing for the issuance of government certificates against silver to be purchased by the secretary of the treasury at stipulated prices, was reported out favorably today by the house coinage committee.

Under this bill the government would coin enough of the purchased bullion to cover the amount of certificates issued and would store the surplus in the treasury. The certificates would be full legal tender.

The bill is understood to have the support of Democratic leaders.

Backed by New Yorker.

Its author, Representative Andrew L. Somers [Dem., N. Y.], chairman of the coinage committee, predicted its passage, if the house leadership will give it right of way.

As reported today, the measure carried a limitation of 40 million ounces a month on the amount of silver bullion which the treasury would be permitted to purchase. Chairman Somers said, however, that this provision was an oversight and will be changed to a limitation of approximately 450 million ounces as the total amount the government may buy.

The bill provides that for the first three months of its operation, the price to be paid by the treasury for silver bullion shall not exceed 40 cents per fine ounce. During the second three months, it may not exceed 50 cents, and may not exceed 60 cents during the third three month period.

Fixes Limit on Rise.

Thereafter, if the 60 cent price has been maintained for an additional three months, the treasury may advance its price, but not more than half a cent a month, until the price of silver has reached 75 cents a fine ounce.

The store of surplus silver which operation of the bill is expected to put in the treasury vaults is to be used by the secretary of the treasury in stabilizing the price of the white metal. Regarding the surplus, the bill says:

"All bullion accepted under this act which is not needed for coinage shall be stored in the vaults of the treasury and there kept intact for a period of not less than five years, except that the secretary of the treasury is authorised and directed, from time to time, when in his opinion world conditions warrant the action, to dispose of such silver bullion at such prices and in such quantities as he shall deem necessary to maintain the stability of the price of silver or to readjust any lack of equilibrium or disparity between the dollar and the currencies of the silver using nations, as may from time to time develop."

Discovers Atlantic Depth of 44,000 Feet Off Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Dr. Paul Bartsch, head of an oceanographic expedition operating off Puerto Rico, reported today the discovery of a new Atlantic depth of 44,000 feet—nearly nine miles. The hole in the ocean floor is near Nares deep, about 75 miles north of Puerto Rico, he said. Nautical charts show the deepest spot hitherto known in the Atlantic as 27,972 feet, in this same vicinity.

ROBBERS HOLD UP OFFICE; LEAVE TRAIL OF COINS

Leaving a trail of nickels, dimes, and quarters behind them, three robbers last evening escaped with $1,500 in bills from the tenth floor offices of the Bentrice Creamery company, 1526 South State street. The small change trickled out of a "leaky" coat pocket of one of the robbers. A fourth member of the band waited outside in a large car and drove his companions away.

Fifteen employes, including one girl, Miss Nora Overstrom, stenographer, were forced to stand with hands raised while the robbers looted the cashier's cage. Leo Berger, the cashier, was forced to open the safe, from which the greater part of the loot was taken.

On their way out of the building the bandits met Herman Rath, 7001 Wentworth avenue, a salesman for the company. Because he did not get out of their way quick enough he was knocked down and kicked by one of the robbers.

DAVIS CONTINUED BY ROOSEVELT AS U. S. ARMS ENVOY

Wants America Leader in Reducing Armor.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 22.—(Special.)—The United States should lead in reducing the armaments of world powers, thus assuring peace, declared Franklin D. Roosevelt, the President elect, today, after a conference with Norman Davis, American delegate to the disarmament conference.

Mr. Davis, a Democrat named by President Hoover to represent the United States in the disarmament conference, and also in the preparation for a world economic conference, was authorized by Mr. Roosevelt to continue as the agent of the new administration in these duties.

The President elect said that he had told Mr. Davis he regarded the disarmament plan of the United States, which is now before the conference of world powers, one of the "most vital and most important international matters before the world today."

Indorses One Formula.

Mr. Roosevelt heartily indorsed elimination of the offensive implements of war as a formula which the "man on the street" can understand. He said it is based on a proposition that armaments in all principal nations are essentially the products of a fear of invasion, and that if this fear can be removed the need for arms will be greatly decreased.

The efforts of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt said, have been wisely directed toward removal of the use of heavy artillery and the elimination of aircraft and poison gases.

There is no great fear spread in other lands by the establishment of infantry forces in alien countries, the President elect said, indicating that he regarded such forces proper in defensive preparation. If people are assured against attack they will view disarmament with complacency and favor, Mr. Roosevelt believes.

Will Assist in Economy.

No date for a resumption of the general conference has been fixed, the President elect said, but he expressed the hope that agreements would be reached without delay, both in the interests of world peace and in the accomplishment of national economies. Every effort should be made, he indicated, toward drastic reductions of the costs of maintaining heavy armaments.

The meeting was held in Mr. Roosevelt's dining room at his New York house, and on the walls were oil paintings showing American battleships in full martial array.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized a view that the disarmament world program was a separate project which might be consummated independently of the world economic conference. He pointed out that disarmament may be agreed upon without delays which might attend the settlement of the world's economic problems.

Discusses Bank Situation.

Before leaving New York for his home in Hyde Park (escorted by a large escort of motorcycle policemen) the President elect conferred also with William H. Woodin, whose appointment as the new secretary of the treasury was announced by Mr. Roosevelt last night, and with Jesse Jones, Democratic member of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It was understood the discussion concerned the banking situation. Another visitor was A. P. Giannini of San Francisco, head of the Bank of America.

Declines to Confirm Report.

Mr. Roosevelt tonight declined to confirm dispatches from Washington listing names of persons said to have been selected by him for the remaining positions in his cabinet. Since all but two names on the list have been widely accepted as those who will receive the posts indicated, the only doubt existing was concerning Harold L. Ickes of Chicago as secretary of the interior, and Daniel C. Roper of South Carolina, formerly collector of international revenue under the Wilson and a McAdoo supporter, as secretary of commerce.

But from the best information available at the President elect's home here it was considered likely that Ickes and Roper will be in the cabinet.

During the ensuing ten days, prior to his leaving for Washington, Mr. Roosevelt expects to spend most of his time in his home at Krum Elbow, on the Hudson river. Reports concerning the length and scope of his inaugural address have been at variance. All that is definitely known is that the President elect has caused his intimate visitors, particularly Prof. Raymond Moley and Louis McHenry Howe, to prepare exhaustive material, but whether he plans to deliver a comprehensive address, giving a detailed program of what he hopes to accomplish, is not known.

Marie Dressler Operated On; 'Resting Comfortably'

New York, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Marie Dressler, the comedienne, was "resting comfortably" tonight after a minor operation, her physician, Dr. J. Willis Amey, said. He would not disclose the nature of the operation, but said Miss Dressler would be back at work soon.

SEE BRITISH-U. S. CODE IN CONTROL OF WORLD PARLEY

Interests Identical and Most Important.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—War debts, disarmament, world economics, currency, tariffs, the far east, and all other questions which are vexing the world today may be thrown into the hopper of one great world conference with Great Britain and the United States calling the tune.

This possibility looms, it was learned today, as the result of the meeting Monday between President Elect Roosevelt and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to Washington. The plans will be developed at conversations which will continue during the next few weeks between Sir Ronald, Roosevelt and Senator Cordell Hull, announced yesterday as the next secretary of state.

Sir Ronald's report of his interview with Roosevelt was a long one, going over the whole ground in a general way. It was considered at a cabinet meeting today, and it is learned that Sir Ronald was instructed to continue his conversations and do his best to line up the United States and Great Britain in a solid agreement on measures necessary to save the world from ruin.

World's Two Greatest Powers.

The idea behind this plan is that the United States and Britain, despite their present troubles, are the world's two greatest powers, and that together they can impose their will on the r... Their interests as creditor powers are identical on most subjects, such as currency, credit, trade stability and sanctity of contracts, while in the far east, although America's interests are dominant to those of Britain, the latter are also large and in complete accord with those of America.

In view of this it is felt here that much time would be wasted in holding a series of separate conferences on individual subjects and that much more is likely to be accomplished by getting the leading powers together and obtaining an agreement on the whole range of interlocked questions.

Sir Ronald's task, therefore, for the next few weeks will be to obtain a common outlook between the two countries. If he succeeds, then it is likely that Prime Minister MacDonald will go to Washington toward the end of March to discuss with Roosevelt plans and machinery for joint action at a great world congress. If Sir Ronald fails, nothing is lost and the negotiations will go on as before in separate compartments.

Would Lower Tariff Barriers.

Some indication of how Britain is planning was given by MacDonald in an answer to a question in the house of commons today. He was asked if Britain's efforts at the world economic conference would be devoted to lowering tariff barriers and he replied that they would be.

On the far east MacDonald was heckled about the embargo on arms to belligerents. He announced that Monday would be set aside for debate on the far eastern question and when pressed on the arms embargo, he declared that such action could only be taken by international agreement. As the situation is changing from hour to hour, he said he could not indicate when such an agreement might be reached, but in a reply to George Lansbury, Labor leader, he made it perfectly clear that Britain would not act alone.

PACKAGE MAILED TO ROOSEVELT FOUND TO CONTAIN BOMB

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Secret service operatives and postal inspectors joined today in a search for the "crank" who sent a crude "bomb" through the mails addressed to President Elect Roosevelt. The contrivance was discovered in the postoffice here yesterday when its wrappings broke open as it was tumbled from a mail sack.

Authorities of the postoffice department were not inclined to be greatly alarmed over the discovery of the "bomb," stating that such occurrences were comparatively frequent. They stated that even had the wrappings not broken the package probably would have been held up and examined because of its suspicious appearance.

Postal officials were directing their search in the vicinity of Watertown, N. Y. The package was mailed there. They stated their belief that it was simply dropped in a mail box in that city, as a postal clerk would have refused to accept it wrapped as it was.

SEAWAY TREATY IS APPROVED BY SENATE GROUP

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The St. Lawrence seaway treaty was today advanced another step toward debate over its ratification when the senate foreign relations committee voted to report it out. The committee ballot showed 15 senators in favor of the report and five against.

No action on the treaty will be taken at this session of congress. This was agreed within the committee prior to the vote. The vote was taken at the solicitation of Senator Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.], who told his colleagues that he hoped action might be had before he left on a week's vacation before assuming his duties as attorney general in the Roosevelt cabinet.

Sponsors of the treaty are planning to press for its consideration at the coming special session.

Members of the committee voting in favor of reporting the treaty out were as follows: Senators Borah, Cutting, La Follette, and Johnson, radicals; Robinson of Indiana, Capper, Fess, and Vandenberg, Republicans; Pittman, Walsh of Montana, Black, Harrison, Robinson of Arkansas, and George, Democrats; Shipstead, Farmer-Labor. Against: Moses and Glenn, Republicans; Swanson, Wagner, and Lewis, Democrats.

Senator Reed asked that he be not recorded and all were understood to have reserved the right to support or oppose the treaty, or urge its modification, regardless of their committee position.

ADMITS CHOKING GIRL TO DEATH IN HER ROOM

A few hours after Amelia Emmons, 26 years old, a former waitress, had been found choked to death in her room yesterday in the Harper End hotel, 5012 Harper avenue, Capt. William Stapleton of the Hyde Park police arrested John Minzer, 30 years old, 3027 Warren avenue.

Minzer, foreman in a laundry in the Hyde Park district, admitted the killing. He strangled the woman early yesterday, he said.

"I had been friendly with Miss Emmons for some time," Minzer told Capt. Stapleton. "Last night, when I went to her room, I had been drinking. She told me that she was going to have a child. I told her that I would rather see her dead than have a child in the condition she was in. She said she would rather be dead, so I choked her."

Miss Emmons' parents, who live in Christopher, Ill., were notified by police.

Pilot Killed When Glider Crashes 150 Feet Onto Ice

GALT, Ont., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Arthur Russell, 30, was killed today when his glider crashed to the ice of Puslinch lake from a height of 150 feet after a wing had buckled. His father, Wesley, and a brother, Clarence, saw the accident.

URGES WARDEN TO KEEP BOY, 16, IN JOLIET PRISON

Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtleff of McHenry county yesterday declared that reports on conditions in the Pontiac reformatory made him reluctant to send any prisoners there.

Because of his "abhorrence for the place," he added, he had asked Warden Frank D. Whipp at the Joliet penitentiary to keep 16 year old August Hirth, sentenced as an arsonist, there rather than transfer him to Pontiac.

Hirth's sentence was one to twenty years. When he arrived at Joliet the warden took steps through the attorney general to have the youth transferred to the other institution, to which young criminals are supposed to be sent. Judge Shurtleff recommended that Hirth be given special treatment at Joliet.

Youthful Killer Taken to Prison to Await Execution

Russell McWilliams, 18 year old slayer, who was recently sentenced to death in Rockford, was taken yesterday to the old prison at Joliet to await his execution on April 21. McWilliams has had three trials, all of which resulted in a death sentence. The first and second sentences were overruled by the higher courts and the case remanded. The youth shot and killed a Rockford man during a holdup.

Very, very Dietrich, very bien soignee is this new costume, tailored meticulously in the manner of gentlemen's formal attire, yet possessing undeniable feminine allure! The suit itself is of a fine black twill, with a gleam of satin in the lapels and the braid stripes on the skirt, and with the contrast of brilliant white in the satin vestee-blouse. The long coat is of the same twill with the same man-tailoring. If you are the envied type who can walk into a room and remain coolly calm in the face of giddy success, make up your mind to have it! The suit, $75. The long coat at extreme right, $65.

HITLER PROPOSES THAT THE WORLD ABOLISH ARMIES

Urges Drastic Reduction of War Machines.

(Copyright: 1933: By the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, whom political opponents depict as a saber rattling believer in big armies and navies, committed himself unequivocally today to a policy of universal and complete disarmament.

"We are willing to go to any lengths to further the ideal of disarmament," the chancellor said in an interview. "But we insist that the same standards shall apply for all. Do away altogether with armies, if you please, and Germany will gladly scrap hers also."

"You have submitted a number of questions," Hitler said as the interview opened.

"To some I shall reply quite briefly, whereas I wish to discuss compulsory labor service and the militia at more length.

Wishes Friendship with U. S.

"First, our relation to America. The attitude of the national government of Germany toward the United States is, as could not be imagined otherwise, one of honest friendship.

"Second, you ask whether I still adhere to my viewpoint that private debts incurred abroad must under all circumstances be paid. My attitude on this question has remained the same. I have never left doubt, however, in anybody's mind that the question of paying debts is not only one of wanting to, but also one of being able to. Above all, the debtor from whom one is to get money back must not first be annihilated by political or economic measures.

"Third, as to what Germany expects from the world economic conference: I should like to hope that the coming conference will find real means and ways of restoring to a sane basis business and industrial life, which have gotten into bad disorder."

Keeps German Program Secret.

The chancellor added that he preferred at this time not to divulge what program the German delegation would urge or present. With some skepticism he pointed out, however, that Germany often had been disappointed at world conferences.

He further explained that Germany did not resort to protective measures for agriculture, which may indirectly lead to limitation of foreign trade, because she wished to keep foreign products out but because German farmers simply would go to pieces if not given effective help.

The chancellor now reached the two problems which seem particularly close to his heart.

"Let me give my purely personal idea that the militia and the general compulsory labor service cannot really be mentioned in the same breath," he said. "The general liability to work for which we are striving has nothing to do with the militia.

Aimed to Keep Up Morale.

"The militia has national defense for its purpose. Universal labor duty had its origin as an idea or conception in the catastrophical economic distress and the unemployment resulting from it.

"Compulsory labor duty is above all to keep hundreds of thousands of young workers from going helplessly to ruin on the streets, but beyond that it is to serve toward bridging class antagonism by a common education for manual work.

"If you travel the highways in the summer time, as I have done, you encounter an ever wandering army of jobless young men who hike from place to place aimlessly, and you notice how they gradually sink lower and lower physically, which also means spiritually and intellectually. It is especially these young people we want to save from ruin.

"As a Nazi I see universal labor duty as a means of inculcating respect for work. Our young people will learn to realize that manual work is something which ennobles man.

Gives Views on Militia.

"Concerning the question of the introduction of militia, I should like to say the following: In 1919 Germany offered the suggestion that a militia be conceded to us. At the time of the introduction of the professional army twelve years of service was demanded of us. Germany, therefore, possesses no reserves of any account educated in military science.

"Now suddenly there is talk of doing away with the professional army and substituting militia. I cannot escape the impression that this is being done merely to sidestep the crux of the problem. The decisive point is not systems of defense, but that of equality. Once this is decided the world can automatically agree to sensible general reduction in armaments. Certainly nobody will want to claim that the world is suffering from the fact that Germany possesses a ridiculously small professional army and no militia.

"No, the world is suffering from the fact that through the treaty of Versailles the idea of two kinds of justice is to be perpetuated. This impossible division into victor states, which therefore have the right to live, and the vanquished, which therefore have less claim on life, is unbearable and leads to general distrust and, in consequence, to rivalry in armaments.

"In itself it is a matter of indifference to us what systems of defense other nations desire to introduce. Let them have professional armies so far as we are concerned.

"It is not a matter of indifference, however, whether one nation possesses 100,000 men without reserves while another with its allies can, in the event of war, mobilize over 12,000,000.

Insists Pact Be Fulfilled.

"Nor is it a matter of indifference whether one nation has been completely disarmed technically, while another, through possession of the most modern weapons of attack, has over tenfold superiority.

"We were compelled by the treaty of Versailles to disarm, not in order that thirteen years later discussions about systems of defense should ensue, but in order that other peoples might be placed in position to disarm. For this disarmament we have been waiting over ten years."

"What are the chances for the reichstag election?" the Nazi chieftain was asked. He replied with infinite confidence:

"We shall win a very great victory."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—Despite government efforts, idleness continues to increase in Germany. It reached a total of 6,047,000 registered unemployed on Feb. 15. This is 80,000 less than at the same period last year. Since the method of counting has been changed, this does not include all the idle. The statistical bureau recently estimated the number of "invisible jobless" in Germany at two million, which would bring the grand total to more than eight million out of a population of 65 million.

Chancellor Hitler today sounded a note of moderation in political affairs after attacks upon Catholic Centrists by uniformed Nazis angered President von Hindenburg. Hitler and his Prussian commissar, Capt. Hermann Goering, issued a warning to all National Socialists to "show discipline and beware agents' provocateurs pretending to belong to the National Socialist party who are creating disturbances at election meetings." Hitler also ordered partisans to abstain from visiting meetings of the other parties and thus avoid clashes.

When Von Hindenburg learned of Goering's ukase to the police to shoot government opponents "regardless of the consequences," he ordered the cabinet to restrain the impetuous Goering.

KIDNAPERS FAIL TO MEET WITH BOETTCHER SR.

Denver, Col., Feb. 23.—[Special.]—Kidnapers of Charles Boettcher II, apparently turned their attention today to selecting an intermediary to deal with Claude K. Boettcher, father of the abducted man.

The father yesterday sought through a newspaper to inform the kidnapers of his inability to meet them and of his willingness to pay the $60,000 ransom.

Claude Boettcher tonight succeeded in eluding surveillance despite an earlier unsuccessful attempt to keep a rendezvous with the abductors. The first attempt was frustrated by the watchfulness of the police who trailed him in hope of catching the extortionists.

When Boettcher saw he was being followed he returned home. He had driven ten miles northeast of Denver.

Alleged kidnapers today telephoned I. A. Anderson, a Colorado Springs attorney, seeking to have him act as intermediary. He declined.

Ova Elja Stephens of St. Louis, a gambler; Maynard Baker, and Marion Rogers, arrested last night in the Boettcher case, were released today on habeas corpus writs.

2 Armed Bandits Hold Up Mortgage Company Office

Two armed bandits late yesterday stole $125 in cash and $375 in checks from the office of the G. A. Willard mortgage house at 4554 Broadway. Miss Evelyn Tuttle, 4820 North Kilpatrick avenue, the cashier, and several other employes were threatened.

MAYOR WORSE; DOCTORS KEEPING ALL NIGHT VIGIL

Two Constantly Are at His Bedside.

although there were marked hopes the condition would improve tomorrow.

It was necessary, it was pointed out, that the mayor get some real rest. This is the reason the drugs were administered, and also the reason for the maintenance of the watch by his bed.

Drama of Constant Watch.

There is a quiet drama about this sick watch as it enters the twenty-fourth hour since the period of crisis which began Tuesday morning. At that time the mayor's temperature shot up to 101.2 degrees as a result of the intestinal disturbance that caused him such severe pain.

The watchers sit about the large reception room adjoining the sick room maintaining an unnatural silence, watching the white door upon which is fixed the large placard bearing in big black letters the admonition "no visitors."

A short, sharp moan comes from behind that door, breaking the stillness. The little group of listeners stirs uneasily.

Members of the family are there, the three daughters, Mrs. Frank Jirka, Mrs. Floyd Kenlay, and Mrs. Richard V. Graham. Others are Edward J. Kelly, president of the south park board, and Ald. James B. Bowler. The women show signs of having wept frequently.

Nurses and Doctors Busy.

A bustling little nurse leaves the mayor's room and scurries down the corridor with a great clicking of heels. A preoccupied physician emerges. He is followed by a colleague. They stand together near the door, talking in low tones. The watchers eye them questioningly.

Within the sick room itself three physicians and two nurses watch Mayor Cermak. Dr. Frederick Tice peers through his spectacles. There, too, are the dapper Dr. Karl Meyer, deft with his hands; the nervous Dr. Frank Jirka, to whom the mayor is both patient and father-in-law.

One week ago tonight, Mayor Cermak was a bronzed, powerfully built man of 59 years, with broad shoulders, who enjoyed the bracing sea air.

Now his large frame seems pitifully shrunken. The healthy sun tan of his face has been supplanted by a cold pallor. He is fifteen pounds lighter, his right lung has been injured by a bullet which will remain in his body for the rest of his days. He moans because of intestinal pains.

Mayor Gets Some Rest.

Late in the afternoon the pains have lessened to an extent where the mayor gets short periods of rest. Dr. Jirka notes a "slight improvement," but adds that the patient cannot be called out of danger until the colitis is under control. That procedure will require a couple of days, he says.

Dr. Tice gives his report. The mayor's heart and lungs are improved to such an extent that no more trouble is anticipated from them, he declared. The weakening due to the colitis is what chiefly concerns the physicians. Their number has been increased to nine by the summoning this morning of Dr. M. M. Coplan, a local kidney specialist.

Dr. Jirka is summoned to the telephone. It is a call from Gov. Horner of Illinois to inquire about the mayor's condition. He is told that the mayor is fighting his intestinal disorder as well as can be expected.

A new temperature reading is announced at 2:30 p. m. The fever has subsided almost three degrees from the high mark of 101.2 to 98.4 degrees, two-tenths of a degree below the normal of 98.6 degrees.

Seen as Good Sign.

"I think it's a good sign," says Dr. Jirka. "Of course, the temperature probably will rise again this evening. That is to be expected."

That report sends the press association men hurrying to telephones to flash the news to the nation. The doctors warn them against a too liberal interpretation of these readings. The reports that have gone over the wires at various times have described the mayor as "definitely recovered" and again as "sinking." The truth is that the patient never has been out of danger since the shooting, the physicians state.

Mr. Kelly goes into the sick room. The mayor is being fed a thin gruel. He doesn't want to eat. He moves his head from side to side, like a protesting infant, to avoid the spoon. A moment later he again falls into the light sleep which the physicians regard as beneficial.

"I wanted him to see me," explains Mr. Kelly, "because he knows I had colitis last week and I've gotten over it fine. I thought it might cheer him up."

The Mayor's Diet.

"The mayor is not given much nourishment. The diet is typical of that administered to patients with intestinal troubles. A little rice water, some gruel, tea with no milk or sugar in it. He gets no solid foods.

"If this colitis had not occurred," Dr. Jirka reveals, "we probably would have been able to move him to my home on Miami beach today or tomorrow. Of course, that is impossible now.

"I feel sure that if the condition is under control by tomorrow or the next day we can say to Chicago: 'You're going to get your mayor back.'"

Into the night the watch continues. Members of the family leave. Mr. Kelly goes. Most of the doctors leave, Jirka and Meyer remaining on duty. At least two nurses always are in the sickroom. The waiting reporters sit and doze.

ISSUE MILLION IN WARRANTS.

Mayor Cermak's action in appointing a proxy to sign school tax anticipation warrants for teachers and other school employés will make possible a distribution by Monday, it was said last night—provided the mayor lives. His proxy would have no authority unless the signing is accomplished while the mayor is living.

Only $1,000,000 of the warrants will be issued at once, as this is all the $50 denominations now printed. Each one must be signed by the mayor's proxy, the secretary of the board of education, President Orville J. Taylor of the board of education and the city controller.

The warrants to be distributed, unless cash is obtainable for the payments, are to be taken from the city's aggregate of funds. They are of the 1931 series and are readily salable. The city purchased them with money from the aggregate of funds and they have been drawing 4 per cent interest for more than a year. They will be replaced with 1932 tax anticipation warrants from the board of education.

Those now in the city treasury are in large denominations and the signing is necessary because of the breaking up into small denominations.

Woman Beaten When She Battles Robber in Home

Mrs. Ida Schmidt, 44 years old, 2050 Van Buren street, was beaten on the head last night when she resisted a Negro robber who invaded her home. She was taken to the county hospital. Mrs. Schmidt was sewing when the gunman entered. Despite his weapon, Mrs. Schmidt struck at him with a pair of scissors. He hit her on the head with the gun and fled.

YOUTH FOUND SLAIN AFTER HIS MOTHER PAYS $30,000 RANSOM

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 22.—(AP)—A tragic denouement was reached today in the kidnaping of the son of a wealthy ranch owner with the discovery of the decomposed body of Abel Ayerza, 24, near the village of Corral De Bustos, in the province of Cordoba, 200 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

The body was found at a point 80 miles from where the medical student was kidnaped on Oct. 24 with Santiago Hueyo, son of the minister of finance. They were on the way to the ranch of Ayerza's widowed millionaire mother, who is prominent in Argentine society. The mother had paid more than $30,000 as ransom. Young Hueyo was returned, unharmed, last November.

The body was found because of clues given by a man who was arrested a fortnight ago and who died suddenly in his cell after asserting to police that the youth had been shot following a quarrel over division of the ransom payment. Two of the gang fled to Chile after Ayerza had been killed on Oct. 31, the man said. Police sought several other persons, including two women, for questioning in connection with the case.

BEAUTIES OF FAR LANDS SEEK TO BE QUEEN OF FAIR

Pictures of Girls Arrive from All the World.

Not even a magic carpet could offer a more authentic flavor of far lands and strange places than is packed into a single room these days in Tribune Tower. It's a carnival of beauty from the four corners of the world—this headquarters of the competition to select a queen to reign over the inaugural of A Century of Progress in June.

Bearing the postmark of Georgetown, British Guiana, South America, there comes the photograph of a dashing brunette society girl, submitted by a close friend who hopes that her chic coiffure and sparkling eyes will rate recognition by the corps of judges.

From Posnan, Poland, came the group of pictures only a few inches away on the same table. All testify to the artistic eye of some previous jury, for the different poses present the witchery of "Miss Poland" with dusky hair and dark eyes.

For contrast there's the blue eyed blond girl of Hilberod, Denmark, whose photograph is the only one received thus far from that country.

Next Sunday and every Sunday for the following five weeks a group of ten photographs will be published in the rotogravure section of this newspaper, with an award of $100 to each girl whose picture appears. This preliminary prize neither helps nor hinders the girl in the final judging, when $5,000 will be placed in the hands of the girl named as queen by the seven judges.

April 15 is the final date for photographs to be mailed, but the last group of the advance prize winners will be published April 2. All that is needed to enter is to mail in your own or a friend's photograph.

PAY $30,000 FOR MEXICAN YOUTHS KILLED IN ERROR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The senate today approved a bill asked by the state department for the payment of $30,000 to Mexico for the families of Emilio Cortez Rubio and Manuel Gomez, Mexican youths killed by deputy sheriffs near Ardmore, Okla., June 7, 1931. The bill had already passed the house.

Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah] was the only senator who discussed the measure.

"I shall not oppose the bill," he said, "but I cannot let it pass without calling attention to the five or six hundred Americans killed by Mexicans in the last score of years, for whose deaths not a penny of compensation has been paid."

Rubio was a cousin of former President Rubio of Mexico. He and Gomez were mistaken as holdup men.

There are now pending some 5,000 American claims against Mexico, many of them for the lives of American citizens. Only 25 have been settled and none has yet been paid. In only one case in twenty years has compensation been received by relatives of an American killed by Mexicans.

DR. YARROS FINDS SOME EVIDENCE OF CHANGING MORALS

Indications of changing morality are apparent from studies of cases made by Dr. Rachelle S. Yarros, director of the marital and premarital clinic, 9 East Huron street, she said yesterday. Dr. Yarros was reviewing the progress of the clinic, which opened last June 1.

"Young men of today do not exact chastity on the part of a woman as a requirement of marriage," she said. "It is not infrequent that young women of good families and the best education have come to me and in consulting with me have told of previous relations with their fiancés. There is growing evidence of liberality on the part of men, and those of the well educated class are the most liberal."

Dr. Yarros' conclusions are based on statements of 295 women who have consulted her in the clinic.

ALLEGED CRIME ARSENAL RAIDED; WEAPONS SEIZED

An alleged hoodlum arsenal at 2332 West Ohio street, where bandits reputedly procured guns preliminary to their night's work and later returned them, was raided last night by Detectives Adam Klonowski and Arthur March of the stolen auto detail.

Two revolvers, two automatic pistols, two rifles, two sawed off shotguns, and one double barreled shotgun, and a large quantity of ammunition were seized. Carl Armato, 45 years old, and his son, Joseph, 17 years old, were arrested. The weapons were found in the bedrooms and pantry. Armato said that they had been kept in the basement which was used as a club for neighborhood youths until recently.

The raid was made on the statements of Frank Brouk, one of four men held for the commission of 200 robberies. Brouk told police that a "stickup mob" used to go to the Ohio street place for their guns, and return them after committing robberies.

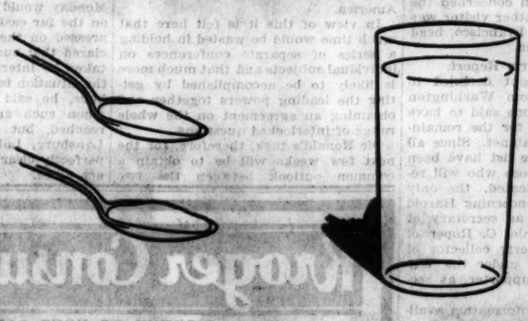
WHAT STOMACH ACIDITY IS AND WHAT YOU CAN DO ABOUT IT

A Few Simple Rules

THE SIGNS OF ACID STOMACH

Nervousness
Neuralgia
Indigestion
Auto-intoxication
Sour Stomach
Mouth Acidity
Nausea
Loss of Appetite
Frequent Headaches
Feeling of Weakness
Sleeplessness

WHAT TO DO FOR IT



TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

According to many authorities, some 80% of the people of today have acid stomach. This because so many foods, comprising the modern diet, are acid forming foods.

It usually makes itself felt in headaches, nausea, "gas," "biliousness," and most frequently in stomach pains that come about thirty minutes after eating. So you can easily tell if you have it.

Now Quickly and Easily Corrected

If you do have acid stomach, don't worry about it. You can correct it in a very simple manner. Just do this. It will alkalize your acid soaked stomach almost immediately. You will feel like another person.

TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia with a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful thirty minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed.

What This Does

That's all you do. But you do it regularly, EVERY DAY, so long as you have any symptoms of distress.

This acts to neutralize the stomach acids that foster your "upset" stomach, that invite headaches and that feeling of lassitude and lost energy.

Try it. Results will amaze you. Your head will be clear. You'll forget you have a stomach.

BUT—be careful that you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy; genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "Phillips" is stamped clearly on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM:

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Stop a COLD the First Day!

Taken Promptly, this Four-Way Remedy Will Usually Stop a Cold the First Day and Save You Much Suffering as Well as the Danger of Serious Complications!

The time to stop a cold is before it gets started. Once a cold fastens itself on you, it becomes twice as hard to remove. And a cold lodged in the system may lead to something worse.

Don't hope to kill a cold with merely local or external applications. A cold is a germ attack, an internal infection and, as such, calls for internal treatment.

Don't hope to kill a cold, either, with anything except a COLD remedy. A cure-all is self-deception. Many preparations which people commonly take for a cold actually make the relief of a cold more difficult because these preparations are constipating and also make the system acid.

The Required Effects

The thing to take for a cold or case of grippe is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine—because it does the four things necessary, in the way that is necessary.

First of all, it opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly—the first step in knocking a cold. Secondly, it kills the cold germs in the system, expels the poisonous infection and reduces the fever. Thirdly, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourthly, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

This is the treatment a cold calls for and anything less is taking chances.

Harmless, but Effective!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine may be safely taken by young and old and whether you stay indoors or go out. There is no penalty attached to its use. For more than forty years it has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula keeping pace with Modern Medicine. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine now comes in two sizes—30c and 50c. Resent a substitute as an attempt to exploit you.

NOTE: During Epidemics a tablet or two of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine every morning and night will do much to fortify your system against infection.

TEACHERS ASSAIL MEASURE TO BAR WIVES FROM JOBS

Call Hruby Bill Attack on Marriage.

The Hruby bill, providing for the exclusion of married women from holding state or municipal jobs, kicked up a tempest yesterday in the City club at 315 Plymouth court. Educators attending a meeting of the club's industrial committee declared that a modern married woman could capably hold down the positions of wife, mother, and school teacher.

The Hruby bill is pending before the industrial affairs committee of the lower house at Springfield, Ill. It was introduced by State Representative John O. Hruby of Chicago. If it becomes a law nearly 3,000 Chicago married women teachers will lose their jobs on Aug. 1.

"The bill will undermine the liberty of various classes of public servants, particularly the teachers," asserted the first speaker, Stanley E. Giese of the faculty of Marshall Senior High school. "It will be a cause for divorce; will encourage men and women to live together out of wedlock, which is opposed to public morals, and undermine the efficiency of the educational system."

Called Attack on Marriage.

Mrs. A. F. Rueben, a teacher at Marshall High school, then took the view that the Hruby bill would put married women in the position of parasites in the economic world, besides being "an attack on the institution of marriage."

The outlook of the single teacher was expressed next by Miss Eva Cowan, also of the faculty of Marshall High school.

"Many women will be robbed of their freedom if this bill is passed," she declared. "Any woman who is tied to a man just because he means her bread and butter has a poor basis for happiness, indeed.

"We hear that women should rear children. Perhaps that was their only function in the days gone by. But in our day an efficient, capable woman can handle the sizable jobs of taking care of her children and teaching school at the same time. I haven't any statistics, but from my experience daughters shoulder more burdens than sons."

Miss Herrick Opposes Bill.

Then up spoke Miss Mary J. Herrick, vice president of the Federation of Women High School Teachers.

"The main consideration is the care of children," she asserted, "and married teachers can do it as well as the spinsters. This bill will take 3,000 teachers out of employment and create more political jobs in the school system. It is an attack on the merit system. If a break is made at one point you will tear down the dikes in other directions."

"It's a jackass kind of bill and we should see that it is killed in the committee," said Arthur M. Nicholson, principal of the Hirsch Junior High school.

Raymond P. Sanford, chairman of the City club industrial committee, who presided, said that the club was making a statement of the case of married woman jobholders to 2,500 churches in the state. He assured the married teachers of the club's support against the bill.

Cites Case of Cicero.

At this point in the discussion a new note was struck by George A. Schwebel, superintendent of the elementary schools of Cicero.

"I am not going on record as in favor of the bill," he declared, "but such a plan has been in operation in my city for fifteen years and its effects have been beneficial.

"One married teacher, I recall, came to me for a place and I refused because of the board ruling. Her husband was a precinct captain for one of your most powerful Chicago politicians and every effort was made to get my job. The school board backed me up. Strangely enough the woman started teaching the next week in one of your junior high schools."

"Yes," retorted James B. Adams, principal of the Funston elementary school. "We've heard a lot about your Cicero school, too."

"Are you referring to the Cicero grammer schools?" asked Schwebel. "You see, I have nothing to do with the Sterling Morton High school and its difficulties. But we are paying our teachers in cash and have no trouble selling our tax anticipation warrants to Chicago banks."

"So the Chicago banks buy Cicero warrants when they won't take our own Chicago warrants," put in Adams.

"The explanation is simple," replied Schwebel. "When a bank thinks about purchasing school warrants it looks into your appropriations and expenditures for education and your debt service. If you are going to get the cash your debt service sheet will have to look like a gilt edged ticket to the world's series."

Representative Hruby, who represents the 19th senatorial district, which includes Cicero and far west side Chicago areas, and who lives at 3810 West 28th street, declared that his legislation would provide employment for 25,000 persons. He said that the bill was not an administration measure, and that he had not talked it over with Gov. Horner or Mayor Cermak. Richey V. Graham, senator from the 19th district, is a son-in-law of Mayor Cermak.

Varecha, Scheduled to Die March 3, Is Granted Stay

The state Supreme court yesterday announced that it would review on a writ of error the case of James [Iggy] Varecha, 17 years old, who is under sentence to die in the electric chair for the murder of Frank Jordan during an attempted robbery on Nov. 16. Varecha pleaded guilty and was sentenced to be executed by Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court. The execution, which was scheduled for March 3, will be delayed until the case is reviewed.

M. V. L. REPORTS ON CANDIDATES FOR ALDERMEN

6 Sitting Councilmen Fail to Get Indorsement.

The Municipal Voters' league yesterday made public its recommendations for the election of aldermen next Tuesday. It also issued a statement in which it criticized the legal technicalities which formed the basis of the decisions of the election commissioners in rejecting a large number of nominating petitions for aldermanic candidates. The technicalities in the law, which cause the rejection of petitions, tend to discourage nonpartisan candidates, the statement said.

Of the forty-two aldermen who are candidates for reelection to the city council, six failed to get the league's indorsement; three were listed as "preferred" over their opponents, and no decision was made between another alderman and one of his opponents. In wards where the sitting aldermen have no opposition, the league's report merely mentions that situation.

The candidates indorsed by the league, those listed as "preferred," and those who have no opposition, are as follows, asterisks denoting sitting aldermen:

Wards.
1. *John J. Coughlin; has no opposition.
2. William L. Dawson.

The aldermen who failed to get the league's indorsement are Irving J. Schreiber [5th], John F. Healy [6th], William V. Pacelli [20th], George W. Robinson [36th], James C. Moreland [41st], and William H. Feigenbutz [45th]. The league showed no preference between Ald. Walter W. Morris [18th] and Bill Furlong, one of his opponents. It listed as "preferred" three sitting aldermen, Thomas J. O'Grady [14th], John Toman [23d], and Oscar F. Nelson [46th].

The league's report on the candidates will be found in the Metropolitan section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of Feb. 26.

MERCURY RISES TO 55 AS WIND SWINGS TO SOUTH

Springlike weather prevailed in Chicago yesterday, the mercury rising to 55 degrees in the afternoon. Today, according to the official forecaster, will be partly cloudy, with a maximum temperature of about 40 degrees.

Yesterday's mildness fell far short of establishing a record for Feb. 22, the highest ever recorded here having been 68, in 1922.

Chicago's warmth was borne in by winds from the south and west. During the morning large ice cakes, formed during the subzero spell in the inner harbor off Grant park two weeks ago, jammed the river and fishing boats had difficulty plowing through.

SENATE PASSES LAST BILL REQUIRED FOR CHICAGO EXPOSITION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—With its passage today of a bill to relax customs regulations in the case of foreign exhibits, the senate gave final congressional approval to the last piece of legislation required for Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition.

The refusal of Postmaster General Brown to authorize commemorative stamps now remains the only barrier to full federal coöperation in Chicago's World Fair enterprise. To date, Mr. Brown has refused to authorize not only a special stamp series but even a special die to be used for cancellations at the Chicago postoffice.

The bill passed by the senate, which had already passed the house, provides that foreign goods for exhibition at the Fair may come into the United States without payment of duty at time of entry. On goods sold, duty will be collected at the time of sale, with allowance made for wear and depreciation.

JACOBS SILENCES COUNTY BOARD'S HECKLING PLOT

Says Revenue Depends on Work of His Office.

The financial hope of Cook county lies in discovering new sources of revenue by building up personal assessments, Assessor J. L. Jacobs declared yesterday. With this assertion the assessor silenced a cabal of county commissioners formed to heckle him on his 1933 budgetary requests. The assessor declared that realty valuations must be reduced further this year if taxes are to be paid, causing a proportionate reduction in revenue unless more personal property is put on the tax rolls by his office.

Earlier in the day several commissioners had looked forward to grilling Jacobs. Examination of his tentative budget had disclosed that he was asking $835,176 for 1933. In making the 1931 quadrennial assessment the office spent $930,000. In view of the fact that much less work is involved in nonquadrennial years, the commissioners expressed themselves as confident they would beat Jacobs down.

The Questioning Begins.

A bombardment of questions greeted Jacobs as he entered the board room at the opening of the afternoon session. With Commissioners George A. Miller and William Busse leading the assault, Jacobs was asked how he could justify his requests in view of his opposition to the demands of a former board of assessors when he was the board's efficiency expert. He was asked how he could justify the salaries paid in his department.

"Real estate valuations for 1932 taxing purposes will have to be cut below the 28 per cent slash already made in 1931 assessments if property owners are to pay taxes," replied Jacobs. "Your only hope lies in the further building up of personal property assessments, which I contemplate in my demand." That was all.

No one pressed Jacobs for amplification of his statement, which showed that there would be no let up in the work of his office. As Commissioner Charles H. Weber later said: "Its meaning is clear. A horizontal cut on realty will bring a reduction in revenue, and necessitate further retrenchment, unless the difference can be made up by an increase in personalty. While it's good news to taxpayers it's bad news to budget makers."

The Attack Crumbles.

The attack on Jacobs crumbled, although efforts were made to revive it. It was proposed to have Jacobs assume the task of investigating the thousands of tax objections which County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki overruled recently in a blanket order. The judge had appeared before the board Tuesday with the request that $50,000 be appropriated for the investigation, declaring it would enable him to decide the merits of individual cases and bring tax money to the treasurer.

The commissioners asked Jacobs to do the work on his present contemplated appropriation. He said a special staff would be needed. Commissioner Marie Plumb moved that $25,000 be voted to Jacobs. The motion was lost when Commissioner Miller declared the work of the budget committee is to cut appropriations.

FEAR TIENTSIN'S VIOLENT HISTORY MAY REPEAT SELF

Japan's Actions Recall Former Massacres.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TIENTSIN, China, Feb. 1. — [By mail.]—Tientsin, scene of more bloody conflicts between occident and orient than any other Chinese city, is apparently on the verge of being the scene of an even more serious conflict between the Chinese and Japanese.

[Dispatches from Tientsin last night reported that foreign residents there were apprehensive over developments in the near future. This apprehension was increased by an announcement by the Japanese government in Tokio that there was "real danger" that it might be necessary to extend the military operations in Jehol province to the Tientsin-Peiping district. The government decided to evacuate all Japanese residents of Peiping to Tientsin and all Japanese women and children from Tientsin to Japan.]

700 U. S. Soldiers in Tientsin.

Due to its location on the Gulf of Chihli on the road to the ancient capital, Peking (now Peiping), the Europeans who came by ship first met the northern Chinese at this port and the contact usually was marked by violence. As a result of these conflicts one finds today permanent garrisons of American, British, French, Japanese, and Italian troops stationed here. All are hang-overs from the latest serious conflict, the so-called Boxer rebellion of 1900.

The present American force in Tientsin, the 15th United States infantry, is commanded by Col. R. J. Burt and numbers some 700 officers and men. The British have a force of practically equal strength and the Italians and French have lesser forces. The Japanese force numbers about 2,500 and is commanded by Lieut. Gen. Nakamura.

Recall Early Conflicts.

Although present day Americans remember Tientsin as one of the battlefields of the Boxer rebellion, Europeans, particularly Englishmen and Frenchmen, have cause to remember the city because of earlier and even more violent clashes than occurred when the allied forces landed here and marched to the Manchu capital in 1900.

However, the first European missions to pass through Tientsin on their way to Peking experienced little or no trouble. In 1655 the first Dutch mission under Peter de Goyer and Jacob de Keyzer passed through Tientsin without interference because the Dutch emissaries carried tribute to Emperor Shun Chih, thus indicating to the Chinese mind that Holland was a tribute state. A similar British mission under Lord Macartney in 1793 also experienced little trouble in passing through Tientsin.

But the Dutch and British were unsuccessful in accomplishing their missions, the announced object of which were to pave the way for trade.

Boxer Uprising Suppressed.

In the spring of 1858 four powers—Britain, France, America, and Russia—sent gunboats to Tientsin with the object of establishing direct contact with the throne and to negotiate trade treaties. The British and French ambassadors, Lord Elgin and Baron Gros, gave the Chinese an ultimatum until 10 o'clock the next morning to give a satisfactory reply or they would take the Taku forts by storm. When no reply was received they opened a bombardment, in which the American and Russian fleets did not participate. The forts were reduced after a two hour bombardment and all foreign warcraft steamed up the river and anchored before Tientsin.

A treaty was finally signed on June 26, 1858, which opened numerous ports to foreign commerce, confirmed extra territoriality under which foreigners residing in China were subject to their own home laws rather than the laws of China, bound China to permit the propagation of the Chistian religion by foreign missionaries, and bound China to pay an indemnity of about ten million silver dollars, two-thirds of which went to England and one-third to France. For some reason Lord Elgin neglected to include Tientsin as one of the ports to be opened to foreign trade, hence the foundation was laid for future trouble.

When the powers returned to Tientsin in the spring of 1859 to exchange ratification of the treaties, they found the river mouth at Taku fort barred with iron chains, heavy booms, rafts, and long iron spiked logs held in place by large iron stakes. The Taku forts had been rebuilt and armed with more formidable guns. The foreigners were informed the emperor was highly displeased with the treaties, that Tientsin had not been opened to foreign shipping, that foreign envoys could not reside in Peking, and that 50,000 Manchu and Mongolian troops were in readiness to repel the invaders.

The American representative, Mr. Ward, attempted to mediate but without success. The British admiral sent an ultimatum and shortly afterward forced an entrance through the barrier and moved up to engage the forts. The forts opened fire, sinking four British gunboats and putting two others out of action. Of the British landing force, 89 were killed and 345 wounded, the wounded included Admiral Hope.

Yanks Rescue Britishers.

Seeing the British flagship disabled and the admiral wounded, Commodore Tatnall of the American frigate Powhattan, then entered the action, not to participate in the fighting but to rescue the British from a dangerous predicament. The British launches, helpless in the high tide, were towed to safety and here was coined the phrase "blood is thicker than water," a declaration of Commodore Tatnall which echoed around the world. But the expedition was a flat failure and the foreign ships withdrew.

Returning the following year, June, 1860, with a larger force, the allies finally captured Tientsin. Long negotiations followed, in the course of which the allied commanders sent emissaries to Peking to establish contact with the imperial court. The embassy was ambushed and of the 26 British members only half escaped alive. On Oct 24 the British and French forces fought their way to Peking and made another treaty, establishing the right of foreign envoys to reside in the imperial capital. Tientsin was opened to foreign commerce.

Fails to End Troubles.

But this did not end the troubles between the foreigners and Chinese at Tientsin. On June 21, 1870, occurred what is known at the "Tientsin massacre." The French had built a church, Notre Dame des Victories, which included an orphan asylum, managed by French nuns of the Sisterhood of Mercy. Owing to Chinese hostility, the sisters were obliged to offer a premium for each child brought in. This resulted in Chinese kidnapers bringing their victims to the orphanage for which they received pay. The story became public and resulted in a riot, culminating in the massacre of almost the entire French population, including officials, priests, and nuns.

The period from 1870 to 1900 was occupied by the foreigners in consolidating their positions in China, hence Tientsin remained moderately peaceful, although the city became known as the "hole of intrigue," due to the activities of the foreigners in trying to exact concessions for railway enterprises, mining ventures and industrial projects. In this period was born the phrase "sphere of influence," meaning that the various European powers had staked out areas of Chinese soil which they looked upon as their own for exploitation purposes.

Powers Send Warships.

The Boxer uprising of 1900, which was suppressed by an allied force including American troops, began as a Chinese patriotic movement against the partitioning of China among the powers. After the defeat of the Boxers the incident was settled in traditional manner. China was compelled to pay a heavy indemnity in excess of $300,000,000 [U. S. currency], which was apportioned among the powers, and in addition was forced to agree to a protocol which permitted the powers to station troops in both Tientsin and Peking and along the railway leading from Peking to the sea at Chinwantao and Shanhaikwan. Out of the Boxer complication was born the so-called American open door doctrine, as opposed to the European theory of "spheres of influence." In practical language this meant that America opposed the partitioning of China among the powers and demanded equal rights for trade in all sections.

CHINESE RESIST JEHOL INVASION; 600 ARE SLAIN

Japanese residents from Peiping to Tientsin, and women and children will be taken from Tientsin to Japan. This is an indication that the fighting may spread to the Peiping-Tientsin area.

The navy today issued a statement saying that, as the Lytton report declared, a blockade of Japan by the world powers would lead to war, therefore Japan must be prepared to overcome a national crisis by being prepared. As Manchuria and Mongolia are Japan's land lifeline, the statement said, the mandated islands in the seas [the Marshall, Caroline, and Ladrone groups] are the ocean lifeline and Japan will not let the islands go, even at the cost of its own life. Other urgent patriotic appeals to the nation to strengthen its defense were also heard throughout the country.

U. S. Envoy to Observe.

[Copyright; 1933; By the New York Times.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 22.—Col. Walter Drysdale, United States military attaché, and other foreign attachés, are preparing to leave Peiping for Jehol tonight to observe and report to the league of nations the morale of the Chinese defenders and whether the Jehol inhabitants are receptive or hostile to inclusion in the Japanese sponsored state of Manchukuo.

Claim Jehol Troops Desert.

CHANGCHUN, Manchuria, Feb. 22.—(AP)—An assertion that Gen. Liu Kuei-tang, commander of 15,000 Chinese troops in the Lupeh region of northern Jehol province, had offered to ally himself with the government of Manchukuo was made by Japanese officials here today.

The officials said Gen. Liu had offered to go into the field against Chinese defenders of Jehol. The Lupeh area is about 70 miles north of Kailu.

Gen. Liu's decision, it was reported, was due to the activities of Manchukuoan and Japanese agents, who have been at work among Chinese irregular forces.

AMERICAN WARSHIPS HELD READY FOR QUICK DASH TO THE ORIENT

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Naval and army officers here were alert today for possible orders which would send them to China to protect American life and property.

They were ready to move their forces to China more quickly than a year ago, when the Asiatic fleet and the 31st infantry were dispatched to Shanghai. Officials said rumors which have been circulated in connection with instructions which have been issued are baseless, explaining that preparations were designed only to facilitate movement if orders were received to sail.

Forty-eight hours were required by the fleet to leave for Shanghai when that city was attacked, but today the flagship Houston and a dozen destroyers and auxiliaries could steam out of Manila in less than 24 hours.

EVENED BUDGET, BETTER BANKING URGED BY LEGGE

Sales Tax on All Items Is Advocated.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 23.—[Special.]—Alexander Legge, homespun doctor of depression, carrying prescriptions in his head rather than in a bag full of fancy statements, came out from Chicago today to warn the senate finance committee's clinic that its patient would be in a bad way if it didn't speedily get a balanced budget and a better banking system.

"How would you do it, doc?" the attending physicians wanted to know.

As the first step in budget balancing, Mr. Legge, president of the International Harvester company and former chairman of the federal farm board, said that, of course, he'd cut down government expenditure. But that won't do the trick alone, he declared.

And so there'll have to be more taxes.

Need More Than Income Levy.

He pushed out his hand against an imaginary wall of protest as he explained the cure he had in mind.

"It's ridiculous for the government to think it can continue to get along with practically one sole source of tax—the man's income. Why, a man's income is getting smaller every year. The government can't run on those taxes, even though the income taxes in the higher brackets are pyramided 23 times. There's got to be another source."

Then he proposed a sales tax. Whereupon most of the senators around the tabled hugged to their hearts the special interests of their own constituents and set up a great argument among themselves as to just what should be exempted.

The visiting specialist interrupted:

"Nothing should be exempted. I'd put a very small tax on everything."

Calls Opposition Unfair.

He's not unmindful, he admitted, of the cry that a sales tax falls unfairly on the working man. Such a cry, he believes, is itself unfair for it fails to realize that a sales tax would not be the only tax; that the high income tax would still be placing its burden, in a pyramid, on the high income brackets.

Senator Walsh [Dem., Mass.], who fought for a sales tax last session, shrugged his shoulders and remarked, "but it is evident that the new President is opposed to a sales tax. We've got to be practical about our reforms you know."

As to his second main remedy—better banking—Mr. Legge solemnly stressed the point that he didn't want to aggravate a serious situation by scare heads, but that he felt the present banking system had not stood up well under the strain of the last two years.

Favors Branch Banking.

"What, specifically, would I do?" he asked himself. "I'd get branch banking, not in state boundary limitations, but in trade areas, and I'd place stricter regulations on all banking."

As for war debts and tariffs, Mr. Legge thinks that any adjustment of the former could well wait for five years, until things are on a more stable footing; and that the latter is frequently "merely an alibi" for bad business.

He's against inflation. Right now, he maintained, it would be dangerous.

And if we balance our budget and effect a better banking system, then we won't need inflation for confidence will bring out currency.

The American farmer, Mr. Legge argued, is, for the first time ready to take medicine, like the reduction of acreage, voluntarily. His proposal is for the government to lease surplus acreage, paying the farmer out of funds collected from a tax on that commodity.

Earlier in the day Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank of New York, disagreed with Mr. Legge and advocated prompt settlement of the debt question and prompt reciprocal reduction of tariffs, with the moderation of other trade barriers.

Dolly Gann Writing Book About Career in Capital

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Dolly Gann is writing a book. It will be all about national politics and Washington society. It will tell the part she has played in both arenas.

The Kansas woman, who came to Washington with her brother, Charles Curtis, when he was first elected to congress, and stayed on to be his official hostess when he became Vice President, will reveal, she says, the inside story of how "Brother Charlie" tried to obtain the presidential nomination at the Republican convention at Kansas City in 1928.

To Depict Battle of Century.

She also will touch on the famous Alice Longworth-Dolly Gann controversy for the best seat at any old dinner table.

She will recollect for her readers those tempestuous days in Chicago last June when she fought for her brother's place on the ticket, and won. She will recall those tiresome journeys through 23 states of the Union last fall, when she spoke for the Hoover-Curtis ticket, and lost.

She will tell about precedence and the bureau of protocol; she will mention the White House hostesses from Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. She will outline what the Washington society woman does on her busy day.

Mrs. Gann hasn't yet selected a suitable title for her memoirs.

"Generally speaking," she said today, "it will be the story of my experiences, political and social, so far as they seem to be of interest to the public."

She added the book would contain "also my opinions, for what they are worth, on the problems of the day."

Nor has she finished her manuscript. There still are several chapters to be written. Her publishers, Doubleday, Doran & Co., are calling for copy, she explains. This week is pretty busy for her, with luncheons, teas, and dinners, but after the fourth of March she will have more leisure.

"I am being asked many questions that I cannot answer about my book," she said further. "Of course, I don't want to give a piecemeal description of the contents, as I prefer to tell my story in my own way."

Somebody wanted to know if she had described the Longworth-Gann fight.

All So-Called Controversies.

"I have covered all the so-called controversies with which my name has been connected," she replied. "But, as I said before, I don't want to tell the contents of my book in advance. Let me tell my own story when the time comes."

Included in the book is to be a tribute to her husband, Edward Everett Gann, for the aid he gave her in managing the various Curtis campaigns. And the last chapter is to have some sort of advice to the Republican party as to how it can stage a comeback.

BR'ER COON OUT TO SMASH TREE SITTING RECORD

Several raccoons departed their living quarters in the Lincoln park zoo early yesterday morning. The number was variously estimated from one to ten by different zoo employés.

One of the animals was discovered in the afternoon resting comfortably atop a tree on the Diversey beach. A call for help from a park employé brought four zoo attendants and a like number of park policemen. They gathered beneath the tree and gazed upward.

"There he is," announced one of the zoo attendants after some hesitation.

"Yep," a second agreed, "that's him."

Decided to Use Nets.

"We'd better use our nets," a third zoo attendant decided.

"Yes, the nets," another said brightly. The policemen nodded their assent and withdrew to the sidewalk.

"You can't take pictures of that monkey," the policeman told a photographer.

"It's a raccoon," another policeman corrected.

"Well, they can't take pictures of it," the first policeman said.

One of the zoo attendants started to climb the tree and paused after attaining a height of some feet.

"It's pretty windy up here," he said.

"Yes," a second agreed, "and it might not be our raccoon."

"I guess I'll come down," the climber decided. He did, and with the others gathered up the nets and went away.

Crowd Is Dispersed.

Two other policemen returned a short time later and dispersed the crowd considering the raccoon.

The zoo employés were unanimous in their response that they knew nothing about their racoon situation. Foreman Richard Auer, in charge of the zoo in the absence of Stup. Floyd Young, said that two had escaped.

"I think there were one or two," he said, "but I wouldn't say anything about it." Supt. Young, reached by telephone at his home, said that it was his understanding that three of the coons had escaped.

A zoo employé was sent to watch the raccoon until it decided to dismount from its perch. The zoo employé is said to be about 45 years old. The average life of a raccoon is about 14 years.

PAY ROLL GRAFT IS CHARGED TO 2 IN HINSDALE

Formal charges of unlawfully obtaining and cashing pay checks drawn on the village of Hinsdale were placed yesterday against two suspended village officials, Harry Menold, veteran superintendent of service for the suburb, and Louis Valdrighi, inspector of sewers. Both men were held to the Du Page county grand jury.

Trustee Ernest B. Johnson of the Hinsdale village board, who conducted the investigation, assisted by former Trustee Frank Van Inwagen, said that investigation of village accounts indicated no further evidence of wrongdoing or graft on the part of the two men accused would be found and that no evidence had been discovered against other officials of the village.

Valdrighi and Menold, he said, have been charged with falsifying the employés' payroll and cashing checks they cause to be issued to a person not employed. Mr. Johnson said that through an error the name of Louis Balducci of Hinsdale had been confused with that of Valdrighi. Mr. Balducci was in no way involved in the investigation, the village trustee said.

EIGHT ESCAPE DEATH AS AUTO GOES IN CANAL

Homestead, Fla., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Eight persons narrowly escaped death today when their automobile overturned into a canal near here.

They were Irving Flint of Chicago, Mrs. Flint and their two children, Mr. and Mrs. George Evans of Chicago, Mrs. Blanche Jacobson, and a Miss Dufresne of Miami.

Mrs. Jacobson fainted in the water and had serious cuts on the head, while Mrs. Flint's back was injured. Joan Flint, 2, suffered a fractured leg. The others were treated for cuts and bruises. Passing motorists pulled the party from the automobile.

ALLMAN ORDERS NEW HARD TIRE LAW ENFORCED

Commissioner of Police Allman announced yesterday that a general order has been issued to the department calling attention to the new state law that prohibits trucks equipped with hard tires to travel on the highways at a speed of more than 10 miles an hour, and ordering the police to enforce the new statute. The police are restrained by an injunction, the commissioner said, from enforcing restrictions on the length of trucks that were provided in another act of the general assembly that was to have gone into effect last Jan. 1.

FEDERAL FARM LEASING PLAN WINS RECRUITS

Allotment Program Seen as Near Discard.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The domestic allotment plan of farm relief is rapidly approaching a legislative death. In its stead Democratic and Republican members of congress are looking to some form of the federal farm leasing plan.

President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt is reliably described as having been taken with the idea of the leasing plan. He is similarly pictured as being repentant that he lent his name and influence to the allotment bill.

In the opinion of senators and representatives who will largely direct the Democratic agricultural program to be put through at the special session, the leasing plan may well turn out to be one of the three key bills aimed at farm relief.

Smith Favors Leasing.

Senator Ellison D. Smith [Dem., S. C.], who is slated to be chairman of the senate agricultural committee, is known to favor a leasing plan which would authorize the government to pay the taxes on cotton, wheat, and corn acreage which the farmer would agree to keep out of production.

The estimated maximum cost of the Smith plan would be 260 millions, with the probability, according to its sponsors, that farmers willing to cut production would call for about one-quarter of this amount, or 65 millions.

While Chairman Marvin Jones [Dem., Tex.] of the house agricultural committee, has not definitely announced his position, it is known that he is not hostile to a substitution of the leasing plan for the allotment plan.

With the leasing plan, according to the tentative program, would go a bill for refinancing farm mortgages, the government assuming the burden, and one for the consolidation and reorganization of federal farm credit agencies.

Big Bond Issue Required.

The bill recently introduced by Representative Jones, seeks to combine these two latter purposes in perhaps the broadest piece of farm legislation yet proposed. The house committee chairman would authorize an issue of 2 per cent federal bonds for which farm mortgage holders might exchange the mortgages now in their possession. Bonds would be exchanged up to 80 per cent of the value of the farm property. Estimators have variously predicted that a bond issue of from 10 to 30 millions would be required.

The government would assume the mortgages, refinancing them on a 46 year basis, with interest at 2½ per cent and additional one per cent for amortization.

At the same time the bill calls for the abolition of the federal farm board and the taking over by a new agricultural loan administration of the federal land banks and intermediate credit banks.

Has G. O. P. Support.

One feature of the farm leasing plan which recommends it to the Democrats is that it promises to enjoy considerable Republican support.

Senator Robert D. Carey [Rep., Wyo.] gave evidence of this today when he introduced in the senate a measure embodying the ideas put forth by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and recently echoed by President Hoover. The Carey bill would authorize the secretary of agriculture to lease up to 50 million acres of cotton, wheat, corn, and other cereal grain land, an advance of 150 millions from the treasury for this purpose being made up by a 2 per cent manufacturers' sales tax on the commodities in question.

It is well agreed that the allotment plan is tottering. Though it may come up for discussion in the senate, where it is now pending, there is virtually no chance of its passage at this session. And by the special session it undoubtedly will be superseded.

Death Knell Sounded.

The death knell of the allotment plan was really struck when the senate, a few days ago, passed the Smith cotton pool bill, which was favorably reported out by the house agricultural committee today. The bill calls for the government to buy up all cotton held by cotton coöperatives, government agencies, and the Red Cross, options on the cotton, on contemplation of a price increase, to be given to producers who agree to cut production at least 30 per cent.

DUTY ON COFFEE CONSIDERED TO BALANCE BUDGET

Is Debated by Democratic Congress Leaders.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Democratic leaders in the congress today considered the revenue raising possibilities of a tariff or an excise tax on the tremendous quantity of coffee which annually enters this country duty free.

There is no possibility that such an impost will be levied at this session. But influential members of the ways and means committee, who are confronted with the task of balancing the federal budget at President Roosevelt's special session, said today that the coffee tariff was certain to be considered with other plans for getting money to balance the federal books.

Has Hit Snag in Past.

Particularly interested is Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], now majority leader and a leading prospect for the next speakership. Mr. Rainey said that for years he had advocated a duty on coffee as "an ideal Democratic tariff," levied, in accord with fundamental Democratic tenets, for revenue only.

But the majority leader recalled that every effort to enact a coffee tariff in the past had run afoul of demagoguery. "Don't tax the working man's breakfast table," is the cry, he said, which has spelled defeat for his previous efforts, and he predicted that it would be raised again.

Nevertheless, Mr. Rainey stated, he is prepared to broach the coffee tariff to the ways and means committee when it begins its work of balancing the budget. Other influential members of the committee indicated a readiness to support him.

Sentiment in the committee seems, however, to favor an excise tax on coffee rather than a tariff. It was pointed out that considerably more revenue could be realized.

Seen as Great Money Raiser.

Representative Hartsill Ragon [Dem., Ark.], a member of the committee, stated that he "would not be surprised to see a tax levied on coffee at the next session."

"It would be a great money raiser," he stated, "but it would undoubtedly meet with strong opposition. Nevertheless it is likely that we will try it."

Chairman James W. Collier [Dem., Miss.] admitted that the tax would be "ideal" from a Democratic standpoint and a "great revenue raiser." But he would oppose it personally as a tax on foodstuffs. However, he said, if the necessity makes such a tax imperative he would probably support it.

Commerce department statistics show that imports of coffee into this country in 1932 amounted to 1,501,126,417 pounds, with a value of $136,811,614.

Representative Rainey stated that he would also suggest a tax on tea, spices, and bananas, none of which are produced in this country.

"MR. JONES, YOU HAVE ASTHENIA!"

"Don't worry! You can get rid of that pepless, rundown feeling in a few days"

"Yes, I can understand how worried you've been—that constant dull headache and that nervous, jumpy, irritable feeling could easily make you believe you had something seriously wrong with you. You'll be surprised how quickly you'll feel your old self again."

It's Asthenia

Millions of men and women are in the same lamentable plight today . . . and not one in ten can guess the cause. That's the insidious thing about Asthenia . . . it drags you down, slows your mind, robs you of your joys and pleasures, yet you hardly realise you're slipping.

Would you like for once to brush the cobwebs from your eyes . . be ready and eager for any task . . experience all the glories of this glorious old world? Then rid yourself of Asthenia—and stay rid of it.

You think that you're not the least bit clogged—you say that you're "regular" as can be—but physicians will tell you that it is only too easy to deceive yourself in this respect and stay doped with poisons. Thus millions of micro-organisms accumulate in the intestinal tract and produce that dull, achy, pepless feeling known as Asthenia.

HOOVER REGIME FOREIGN AFFAIRS STAND ASSAILED

Naval Policy Also Under Fire in House.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Hoover administration's conduct of foreign affairs was attacked in vehement language on the floor of the house today. Representative George Holden Tinkham [Rep., Mass.] charged flatly that President Hoover and Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson had abandoned American traditions, had impaired American security and safety, and had relied on a foreign policy based on "secret diplomacy," and a desire to meddle in European affairs.

The black bearded Massachusetts Republican asserted that the Hoover-Stimson policies in the Asiatic and on disarmament "have brought the United States to the brink of war in the east." He charged that the retired administration had coöperated far too much with Great Britain. In this connection, Mr. Tinkham made public an exchange of correspondence with the state department, in which he asked pointblank whether "Sir John Simon or any other British agent" had represented the United States at the Geneva conferences on the Japanese-Manchurian situation. The state department's answer was, "No."

Vinson Asks for Support.

Mr. Tinkham delivered his remarks shortly after Chairman Carl A. Vinson [Dem., Ga.] of the house naval affairs committee, had issued a call to the nation for popular support of a naval building program committing this country to expend about $63,000,000 annually on new aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and submarines. Speaking in support of the 308 million dollar naval appropriations bill, the Georgia Democrat indirectly assailed recent Republican administrations for allowing "the American fleet to deteriorate."

Figures laid before the country by Mr. Vinson emphasized that the United States fleet was now barely on a parity with Japan and would be far below Japan in 1936, if no new building is authorized. He asserted the United States was paying an unpreparedness bill annually amounting to two billion dollars. The Georgian termed the 5-5-3 naval ratio, adopted for Great Britain, the United States and Japan at Washington in 1922, a "self-deluding fiction."

Intimates Alliance.

Throughout his attack on the foreign relations policy of the Hoover administration, Representative Tinkham harped again and again on his intimation that some sort of alliance must have been arranged with Great Britain in recent years. On one occasion, he asked pointblank whether a secret political commitment had been made by this administration, "offensive or defensive in character," with Great Britain. A moment later he asked whether Great Britain had been promised that the American navy and American naval defense shall be further curtailed.

"That," continued Tinkham, "would have been in accordance with the policy of the present administration during the last four years. It would have been in accordance with the London treaty, negotiated by the present administration. That treaty supported British navalism. It would have been in accordance with the subsequent policy of the present administration of not building any naval vessels and of preventing any attempt by the United States congress even to approximate the agreed treaty ratio.

Quotes Geneva Dispatch.

Representative Tinkham began by quoting a dispatch from Geneva on April 28, intimating Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, had implied he was authorized to speak for the United States. Mr. Tinkham added that on May 3, he had asked the state department if Sir John or any other British agent had authority to represent the United States. He asked also if A. Sweetzer, American official on the league secretariat, had been excluded from secret meetings of the league. The department replied that neither Sir John Simon nor any other official of the British government was authorized to represent the American government. It stated that the American position on the Japanese-Chinese situation had been discussed with several European officials, including Sir John.

HIGHWAY USERS TOLD RAILROADS FIGHT RIVALRY

Accused of Wanting Freight Monopoly.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Railroad lobby and propaganda to strangle commercial highway travel was condemned this afternoon by Chester G. Moore, director of the Illinois highway users conference. He talked here before the annual convention of the Illinois Petroleum Marketers' association.

"The objective of the railroads in this state and in other states," said the speaker, "is to hamstring bus and truck service with regulations and taxes so that the cost of highway travel will be boosted to the rates charged by the rail carriers.

"I'm not referring to remote possibilities. I'm talking about existing facts. Let me read one sentence of House Bill 174 pending before this general assembly, a bill regulating common carrier trucks and buses:

"'The commission shall fix the same rates or charges or classifications for the service of motor vehicles that it fixes for the services of railroads of a like character.'

Aim at Private Freighters.

"There is railroad agitation in this and other states to adopt the Texas truck law. The bill pending here in Springfield has to do with common carriers only, but the railroads are really aiming at the contract and private highway freighters.

"The Texas law permits a maximum pay load of 14,000 pounds on a truck en route to a railroad station. On a truck en route to some other destination, the maximum load is 7,000 pounds. I don't know why a pavement that would carry 14,000 pounds to a railroad can't carry over 7,000 pounds when it doesn't mean freight revenue for the railroads.

"The Illinois highway users conference, a branch of the national conference headed by Alfred P. Sloan Jr., doesn't contend that the trucks and buses should not pay a fair price for the use of the public roads. It does contend that we now pay this fair price and that taxes should not be heaped upon us merely for the benefit of a competitive form of transportation.

"The railroads have lost business, mainly because of the general economic conditions, but also because of their inflated financial structure and their backwardness in engineering. The public should not be deprived of economical highway transportation merely to aid the railroads.

Appreciate Railroad Value.

"We have no objections to regulations for the public benefit, such as rules governing weights, speeds and size. We appreciate the value of railroads to the country and wish the railroads would use more trucks and buses in their service. But we want the railroads to save themselves by removing governmental meddling and by improving their service. If the railroads are going to sink, we don't want them to pull down highway transportation with them.

"You petroleum marketers should appreciate that commercial travel consumes from a fourth to a third of all the gasoline you sell. Buses and trucks, constituting twelve per cent of the total Illinois registration of motor vehicles, paid thirty per cent of the total registration fees and gasoline tax in this state last year, $13,000,000.

"The railroad lobbyists cry 'regulate the bus and truck.' They mean, 'strangulate the bus and truck.' It's to your interest and to the public interest to defeat this move."

'DECLARE WAR ON BOLIVIA FRIDAY!' PARAGUAY EDICT

Congress Ordered to Act on Chaco Conflict.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Congress will meet Friday to declare war formally against Bolivia.

For some eight months the two nations have battled for possession of the Gran Chaco border territory. In their latest renewal of a 50 year dispute over it. Hundreds have been killed in many battles but neither country thus far has given the conflict the official status of war.

"Bolivia's aggression has created a de facto state of war," said a government decree, issued last night, summoning congress for the purpose of declaring war.

Planes Aim at Colombian Ships.

BOGOTA, Colombia, Feb. 22.—(AP)—The war ministry today reported that five Peruvian airplanes had vainly attempted to shell the Colombian gunboat Cordoba near Tarapaca, a river village in the Leticia border area over which Peru and Colombia are in conflict.

A Colombian air squadron pursued the enemy planes, the ministry added, hitting one of them. The Peruvian machines flew over neutral Brazilian territory, the communique charged.

The government decreed a war tax today of ½ of 1 per cent on all earned income and salary of every Colombian citizen over the age of 18 during 1933. It is payable quarterly. The government expects the war tax will yield 3,000,000 pesos [$2,850,000] a month.

Peru Backs Leticia Action.

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Congress last night passed a motion of confidence in the ministers of foreign affairs, war and navy after the cabinet members had explained the activities of their departments in the Letician controversy with Colombia.

The action was taken at a secret session which followed approval of legislation establishing a virtual gold monopoly by the government.

TELLS ASSEMBLY SALES TAX WILL BANKRUPT STORE

Foes of Plan Have a Day Before Committee.

Wins in Indiana

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The state senate passed the retail sales tax bill today under suspension of rules. The vote was 35 to 13. Earlier in the day the house approved the measure, 64 to 29. Gov. Paul V. McNutt is expected to sign the bill before the end of the week.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Opponents of the pending 3 per cent sales tax bill had their inning before the house judiciary committee today. They were given a two hour hearing which had not progressed far before the statement was made that if the bill in its present form became a law it would "bankrupt practically every merchant in Illinois."

This was the statement of J. J. Maloney, president of the Decatur association of commerce and the most vehement of a group of retailers who appeared to protest the bill's passage.

"No merchant is making a profit these days," he declared, "and if you saddle this tax upon us with no provision for passing it on to the consumer you will bankrupt us. It would break the retailers but not the consumers."

Maloney and other merchants are having amendments drawn to make the impost a stamp, tax stamps to be printed in fractions of a cent denominations which would be bought by the consumer and given the retailers for purchases.

Quote Pinchot Against It.

To counteract yesterday's address by Gov. M. S. Conner of Mississippi, who told of the success of the sales tax in his state, R. R. Rau of the Illinois Retail Furniture Dealers' association read extracts to the committee from Gov. Gifford Pinchot's recent message to the Pennsylvania legislature.

"A sales tax is bad because it is simply one more device to put the tax burden mainly on those who are least able to pay," Gov. Pinchot said, according to Rau.

The stand of many retailers' organizations was explained by Robert Irwin, secretary of the Springfield chamber of commerce, who said that they were willing to consider the tax as an emergency relief measure, but wanted it passed on to the consumers.

At the conclusion, Chairman Benjamin Adamowski [Dem., Chicago] announced that no vote would be taken on the measure until tomorrow.

Pass Baby Eye Wash Bill.

This morning the house passed the bill calling for the washing of new born babies' eyes with a solution of silver nitrate to prevent blindness. The vote was 122 to 9.

This measure passed both houses in 1931, but was vetoed by Gov. Emmerson, who was advised by Attorney General Carlstrom that it was unconstitutional.

Howard L. Doyle [Dem., Decatur] declared that an analysis of the Carlstrom opinion did not show a single "valid" reason for calling the bill unconstitutional. Other proponents for it were Joseph L. Rategan [Dem., Chicago] and Grover C. Borders [Dem., East St. Louis]. The bill now goes to the senate.

An important bill prepared by the Illinois Bankers association was introduced in both houses today—in the senate by W. E. C. Clifford [Dem., Champaign] and in the house by H. W. Teel [Dem., Rushville].

The primary advantage claimed for the bill was that it would assure more protection to depositors in state banks.

MYSTERY YOUTH, FACING CELL, IS SILENT ON PAST

A youth of 19 refused to reveal his real identity or give any information concerning his family yesterday as he awaited removal to Pontiac reformatory to serve one year to life for robbery with a gun.

The prisoner, who gave the name of James Grey and several fictitious addresses in Los Angeles, was sentenced Tuesday by Judge Rudolph Desort in the Criminal court. Testimony showed that he took $5 on Jan. 6 in a robbery of Alex Foreman and Miss Sarah Kulbarsh, both of 4821 Drake avenue.

"I admit the robbery," the defendant told Judge Desort," and I am willing to accept my punishment. My past, my family and other like matters are no one's business but my own."

CHICAGO HONORS WASHINGTON ON 201ST BIRTHDAY

Speaker Warns Against Rising Bureaucracy.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Not communism but the public psychology which encourages expansion of governmental powers and bureaucracy endangers popular government in this country, Prof. Andrew C. McLaughlin of the University of Chicago told members and guests of the Union League club in a Washington birthday commemoration address yesterday. The meeting was one of many held in Chicago in observance of the 201st birthday anniversary of the first President.

"We sometimes hear it said glibly that we ought to have a dictator," Prof. McLaughlin said. "For seven centuries the trend of government of the Anglo-American peoples has been to establish a government of laws and not of men. If we do have a dictator, it will not come about by force of arms, but through the people encouraging the President to expand his authority."

Mind of Public Changed.

In speaking of the "tremendous growth of governmental power in the last 30 years," Prof. McLaughlin said that the government has taken upon itself such a complexity of activities that at times the constitution appears to be an 18th century document which has lost all reality.

"The greatest change is in the state of mind of the people, however," he said. "It has changed from one of being afraid the government would do things to one of wanting the government to do things, the more the merrier. The people apparently think that if the government does something no one has to pay for it, that money can be made of moonbeams."

"George Washington said that liberty and popular government cannot exist without religion and morality. It is evident to all of us that the capitalistic system is doomed if it is going to kill its own child, credit. And what is credit without honesty? Or what is credit without faith and morality?"

Quotes Washington's Message.

Rear Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, commandant of Great Lakes Naval station, speaking before the Chicago chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at its Washington luncheon in the Stevens hotel, quoted as follows from the last message of Washington as commander in chief of the army two months after the close of the revolution:

"'It is within the power of the people themselves to establish or ruin their national character forever. There are four principles essential to the very existence of the nation: An indissoluble union, a sacred regard for public justice, a proper military establishment in time of peace, and a sacrifice of private interest for the public good.'"

Judge Johnson Speaks.

United States Judge George E. Q. Johnson, speaking at a dinner of the Illinois Society, Sons of the American Revolution, in the Hotel La Salle last night, declared that the moral development of the American people had not kept pace with its industrial and financial progress, and laid the increase in federal power to the failure of local governments.

Members of the Combat Medal Men's association celebrated the occasion last night with an entertainment and dance at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Beneath the statue of Washington before the Art institute, six Boy Scout troops of Austin laid a wreath yesterday. A. S. Barnes, chairman of Troop 342, was in charge.

FARMERS APPEAR IN COURT TODAY TO HELP DEBTOR

Members of the Kendall County Farmers and Business Men's Protective association have announced that they would appear today before Master in Chancery Darnell at Yorkville to oppose the entering of a deficiency judgment against August Wollenweber Jr., farmer, whose farm is in foreclosure.

A mortgage of $20,000, with added charges of $3,000 in interest, is held by the Life and Casualty company of Chicago. The association members maintain that if the sale of the farm will not bring $23,000, the lending concern should assume the loss.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch wishes to correct any erroneous inference which might have been drawn from an article in THE TRIBUNE yesterday that he was a guest at a party the previous night for Lawrence C. O'Brien, former state representative. Judge Lynch was not there. The city news bureau corrects an erroneous item, which stated that W. J. McLaughlin, 2017 South 12th avenue, Maywood, had attended the same party before his car crashed into a Michigan avenue bridge support. Mr. McLaughlin was at an American Legion meeting, he explained.

The City National Bank and Trust company of Evanston states that John Hough, described Sunday in THE TRIBUNE as a purchasing agent for the institution at the time of his death, was never connected with the bank an' was not known to the officials.

WIFE STEALING CHARGE PACKS BRITISH COURT

Settlement Reached Ere McCardie Rules.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Wife enticement figured again in a British court today before Justice Sir Henry A. McCardie, epigrammatic commentator on marital relationships whose decisions in former cases have caused storms of controversy around a husband's rights over his wife. The hearing revived the question whether a wife has the right to associate with whatever male friends she likes as long as infidelity is not involved. Mr. Justice McCardie has so held in the past.

Another court storm, however, was avoided after two dramatic attempts to reach an agreement privately. After the second, counsel for the plaintiff announced that a settlement had been reached and the case was called off.

Curious Come in Buses.

George Tate, 60 year old proprietor of an electrical engineering business, charged enticement of his 48 year old wife, Daisy, against William Marshall, 55, town clerk of St. Albans. He sought damages for that and made a supplementary complaint of libel. Marshall denied both.

Special buses were run from neighboring towns for would-be spectators anxious to hear Mr. Justice McCardie's comments on how far a wife can go, but most were disappointed after standing in the snow for hours.

"There has been considerable destruction of matrimonial life and I will give evidence of that and of a refusal of matrimonial relations," G. M. Hilbery, Tate's chief counsel, declared in opening. McCardie ruled that such evidence was admissible and the jury which had been excluded was recalled, but the hearing was immediately adjourned for 15 minutes for the first unsuccessful attempt at reconciliation.

Asked Husband for Wife.

Hilbery, stating the case, declared that Marshall possessed more means than Tate and that he employed it to win Daisy's affections. Despite Tate's protests, he sent her flowers and letters, declaring that he had the right to do so if he wished. Finally he visited Tate's home and asked him to give his wife grounds for divorce or else to allow her to live in his house with the defendant guaranteeing that her chastity would be respected. Tate ordered Marshall out, whereupon Mrs. Tate moved to a separate room.

During a second adjournment the parties again got together and Hilbery announced that a settlement had been reached after the hearing was resumed. He added that there was no question of sexual irregularity in Tate's charges.

PROPOSE BOND ISSUE REFERENDUM FOR ELEVATED HIGHWAY

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Representative R. V. Libonati [Rep., Chicago] introduced a bill in the general assembly today authorizing park boards to call a referendum election on a $20,000,000 bond issue for an elevated highway. So far as could be learned, the legislator is without backing of any civic group in this move.

The bill consisted of the printed form for a similar bill passed in 1929, with pen and ink changes of dates and numbers on the draft. A referendum under the 1929 act was defeated by voters of the west park district objecting to a realty tax for a traffic improvement.

Representative Libonati's bill has no part in the current promotion by civic agencies for a west side elevated highway or three west side elevated highways to be financed from gasoline tax revenues.

You'll do it better on DATED coffee

Science says coffee is a wonderful stimulant. Drink it to sharpen your wits as well as to pep up your muscles. But never drink stale coffee.

IT'S the hard-hitting, fast-moving, peppy people who drink most coffee. They lead in outdoor sports, play a cleverer game of bridge, seem to excel in everything they do.

And they frankly use coffee as a stimulant . . . to keep up their energy . . . to drive away fatigue.

Why can't we all get the same benefit from coffee?

Some of us actually don't dare take more than one cup! Afraid it won't agree with us . . . spoil our dinner . . . prevent us from sleeping soundly. Why? Are we different in some way?

No, those are exceptional cases, says science. Coffee is now known to be a perfectly safe stimulant so long as it is fresh. And if you are a normal, healthy grown-up, you can drink as many as 5 cups a day of fresh coffee, without bad effects.

But stale coffee contains rancid oil. Nearly half a cup to a pound. When you drink stale coffee, you can easily get indigestion or "nerves" or sleeplessness.

No wonder Chase & Sanborn instituted Dated Coffee. You buy Dated Coffee with an expiration date printed plainly on every pound. And no can is allowed to stay on your grocer's shelf after its date has expired. Chase & Sanborn's Dated Coffee is always sure to be fresh and rich in flavor.

You can safely get a kick out of Dated Coffee. Order Chase & Sanborn's Dated Coffee tomorrow. You'll be keener, more alert, you won't give in to fatigue so easily—on Dated Coffee.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE RATIFYING CONVENTION IN ILLINOIS.

The Illinois legislature is faced with the problem of constituting a convention to ratify or reject the prohibition repeal amendment.

The decision may be confused by the word "convention" itself. The word suggests a deliberative body with a wide range of choice. Thus, the constitutional convention of 1787 had to exercise its judgment over a wide range of proposals. The delegates had to compromise conflicting opinions on many points and choose between a multitude of possible provisions. A similarly wide range of choice, calling for the exercise of judgment, lay before every convention concerned with framing a state constitution. A party convention is also a deliberative body. It must choose its candidates and its platform from among a host of eligible candidates and proposed planks.

The conventions which will ratify or reject the repeal amendment in the nature of things are of a wholly different sort. They can propose no alternative to the repealer. They can only accept or reject what congress has proposed. And if the delegates to the conventions are elected by popular vote, as they certainly will be, they can be elected only as supporters or opponents of the 18th amendment. There is no middle ground.

The convention should be simply a device for obtaining a referendum vote of the sovereign people by states on a constitutional proposition, precisely as the electoral college has become a device for registering the majority choice by states on presidential candidates. The delegates should be elected neither from congressional nor legislative districts. The congressional and legislative districts are gerrymandered in every state in greater or less degree and are not truly representative. In Illinois they are notoriously misrepresentative.

Cook county, with half the state's population, has only 37 per cent of the districts in the state. If the delegates are elected by districts, one downstate American citizen will have nearly twice as much influence in determining what shall be in the constitution of the United States as two citizens living in Cook county. As a matter of fact, the disparity within Cook county is even greater than the disparity between Cook county and the rest of the state because there have been more violent shifts of population within this county than anywhere else in Illinois. In consequence a vote in Chicago's river districts, despite their dwindling populations, has four and five times the weight of a vote in the outlying residential areas. If the ratifying convention is made up of delegates elected from these districts the result will be that half a dozen home owning citizens of Oak Park and Wilmette will have less influence on the decision than one lodging house bum on Des Plaines street.

The congressional districts are just as bad because they, too, have not been changed since 1901.

The only way in which the majority sentiment in the state can be obtained is by election of all the delegates at large, just as the presidential electors are chosen.

It is of no consequence whether the convention consist of two or twenty-two or a hundred and twenty-two delegates. The delegates who are seated, like the state's presidential electors, should be all of the same view and that view should be the view of the majority of the voters of Illinois. That end can be attained by election at large and in no other way.

So far as the outcome in Illinois on this amendment is concerned, the method of selecting the delegates is, no doubt, of small consequence. Illinois is overwhelmingly wet and will vote to repeal the 18th amendment despite all the gerrymandering that can be attempted. But the method of selecting the convention is of immense importance as a precedent. The consequences of defeating the majority will on a constitutional question by gerrymandering could be appalling. The constitution is difficult to amend as matters stand and it should be difficult to amend; but if to the existing obstacles others are added which in effect destroy the ballots of hundreds of thousands of voters while adding weight to the ballots of others, the people may despair of the constitutional means of changing their basic law and avail themselves of a more primitive show of strength and will.

PRESS SUPPRESSION IN GERMANY.

The suppression of the press by the present German government makes a very unfavorable impression on the American public. No doubt that seems negligible to the new régime, but circumstances may arise in which American opinion, which has not a little to do with American policy, will not be without some effect upon German conditions. It is not necessary to accept Mr. Stimson's conception of the force of world opinion to recognize that relations between nations are sometimes influenced by opinion.

At any rate, it may be worth noting that a government which by violence suppresses criticism and dissent cannot impress a free people with confidence in its righteousness or even its likelihood of survival. Americans have always believed that freedom of utterance is essential to good government and therefore in the long run to stable government. A régime which suppresses it must always be suspect and it is especially suspect when it appears in a nation so advanced in popular education and in all the elements of modern civilization as the German. The suppression of the press and speech by the communist rulers of Russia gives the chief reason for the reluctance of the United States to enter into diplomatic relations with the soviet republic, so-called. We take it for conclusive evidence that the bolshevist régime is imposed by force and not by consent and in due time must go. Investing politically or economically in such an enterprise seems to us a dubious policy, and in the relations of nations we have no disposition to coöperate with a government which fears the light and will not risk discussion or dissent. We distrust the representations of such a government and find it difficult to enter into those relations of mutual benefit which weave the fabric of civilization.

With every disposition to make allowance for the effects of a prolonged and disastrous war and its destructive aftermath, it is disappointing to find the German sense of reasoned order, German faith in science and law, German patience and discipline overborne by bitter factionalism and reckless political violence. It is difficult to believe that the character of the German people finds true expression in this manipulation of factions and this substitution of physical force for open council and rational coöperation.

FOR STATE AND TREASURY.

Mr. Roosevelt's appointments to the two most important cabinet posts are promising. Senator Cordell Hull, who will be secretary of state, has not only had long experience in public affairs but has given special study to the tariff, and tariff adjustments are likely to be a very important problem of our foreign relations. Mr. Hull is said to hold to the doctrine of tariff for revenue only, but it is not likely that he is disposed to outstrip his party in this policy or ignore conditions which must influence tariff adjustments, even if his official powers enabled him to do so. He should be a more informed and competent negotiator in this field of international relations than most of our secretaries of state have been or have had need to be in recent years. Congress has of course the final word on any treaty commitment, but if we are to enter upon a period of trading for tariff concessions Mr. Hull should be able to protect and advance the nation's interests in negotiation.

We are not informed as to Mr. Hull's opinions on other phases of our foreign affairs. We assume that he is in accord with the main outlines of his party's policies since the Wilson administration, but the degree of his zeal on their behalf we do not know. We hope it is not of a high temperature and there may be some encouragement in the fact that Mr. Hull is from Tennessee, from the midwest, and not from the Atlantic seaboard, where the apologetic American is conspicuous. No doubt it is Mr. Roosevelt who will determine the conduct of our foreign affairs in any decisive form, but perhaps we may hope from his selection of a western man for his deputy in that department that we may have less colonialism and more regard for the self-respecting Americanism of the west in our diplomacy. Certainly it would be an event of first rate moment to the American people if our diplomacy were brought back to earth, back to American tradition and principle, back to a sense of responsibility for the peace and welfare of the American people.

The appointment to the treasury of William H. Woodin of New York brings to that heavy responsibility a business man conspicuously successful in large private enterprise and, until the campaign of Alfred Smith, a Republican. The promise of a sound and able administration of the treasury under Mr. Woodin seems excellent.

NEW YORK'S PROTECTIVE TARIFF.

The Wisconsin legislature has approved a resolution directing the attorney general of the state to appeal to the federal Supreme court against New York's dairy cattle regulations. New York has set up what is called a sanitary regulation. No cattle may be shipped into the state which have not passed three successive tests for Bang's disease or contagious abortion.

There is no doubt, of course, of the right of a state to protect the property of its citizens from injury. New York has the right and even the duty of protecting its dairy herds from contagious diseases. But no state has a right to establish under the guise of a sanitary measure what in fact is a boycott. To guarantee freedom of trade between the states was one of the primary aims of the federal constitution and no measure has proved of greater value in the economic development of the nation.

The New York regulation, as politicians and dairymen have admitted in their more candid moments, is a measure intended primarily to create and maintain a monopoly of the New York dairy cattle market for New York breeders. It is a restraint on interstate commerce disguised as a sanitary measure. The federal court in New York has neglected to look beneath the appearance to the substance of the regulation. In directing an appeal the Wisconsin legislature is advancing the interest of the dairy industry in the state and at the same time is striking a blow for constitutional freedom of trade within the United States.

Editorial of the Day

CENT-A-DAY SOLDIERING.

[Beloit Daily News.]

The French chamber of deputies has been asked to approve a measure by which the pay of the French soldier would be boosted from 25 centimes a day to one franc; and when you ponder over these figures you can understand why it costs just about as much to maintain the American army as it does to maintain the French army, even though the latter is incomparably the larger of the two.

Twenty-five centimes amount to just about one cent. That's what the poilu has been getting. If the pay increase goes through he will be drawing about four cents a day.

Contrast that with the liberal pay scale in the American army and you can understand why American army costs are comparable to those of the French in spite of the disparity in size between the two forces.

"LOS ANGELES TO FEED Poor Wild Goat Meat."—Headline. It seems a very nice idea, for we should always be kind to animals. But why feed the wild goats meat? Who ever heard of goats eating meat? It would be much better to feed the goats good nourishing things that they like, such as old shoes, tin cans, waste paper, and telephone wire.

FRIENDS.

If all the sorrows of the weary earth—
The pains and heartaches of humanity—
If all were gathered up and given me,
I still should have my share of wealth and worth
Who have you, Friend of Old, to be my cheer
Through life's uncertain fortunes, year by year.

Thank God for friends, who dearer grow as years increase;
Who, as possessions fail our palsied hands,
Become the boon supreme, than gold and lands
More precious. Let all else, if must be, cease;
But, Lord of Life, I pray on me bestow
The gift of friends, to share the way I go.

"STALIN MAKES SPEECH in Moscow; Is Cheered Wildly."—Headline. It would seem to a man up a tree that it is hardly necessary to pay cable tolls to know that Comrade Stalin's talk was cheered to the echo. Can you imagine somebody in the audience at the end of the speech getting up and saying, "Pardon me, comrade, but you are full of prunes," or, "Lissen, Stalin, I think your speech is the boloney." Not hardly. There's too many firing squads and stone walls around Moscow.

INSCRIPTION IN A BOOK.

Oh quickly, here's My offering
Of peace entitled
Any Spring.

For even June
Would winter be
With you and Shelby
Mad at me.

DOROTHY ALDIS.

All right, then, but it was darn near time. We expected Any Spring would be lovely, but there are half a dozen poems in it we wouldn't have liked to miss. For instance, "The Opponent"—

Struggling up with her last breath
She walked, straight as a rod;
And like two parents, life and death,
Turned to whisper and nod.

Foolish to fight—smiling over her head—
Eternity was nothing to mind!
Didn't all tired children go to bed?
And wasn't sleep kind?

We do like that. And, of course, there's "Portrait," which we published only a few weeks ago, and "Young Morning," and "Words (For G. S. K.)," and this perfect bit of a thing called "Reproof"—

How daisies seem to shame a heart stampeding—
Standing there, their little faces wet,
Their roots in earth, so cool and so unheeding,
With nothing to remember
Or forget.

We don't believe that has been bettered since Adelaide Crapsey's "Cinquains."

"QUAVVING" is announced as a new word that will henceforth become a part of the English language. It was invented by Prime Minister MacDonald in a moment of deep dejection and means "to press, press, press and get nothing done." And it might be used equally well to mean "to press, press, press and not collect a nickel's worth of war debts." Anyhow, it's a good word and very much needed here in America. For example: "Oh, congress, come on now and quit your quavving."

He lunges mightily: the music sounds;
his coattails follow him from side to side.
The audience wonders, while he sways and bounds, whether to seem amused or sit wide-eyed.
He bows a bow, this Russian marionette, bringing his heels together with a snap, his face so bland and calm that we forget
he might be very pleased if we should clap.

How little any one of us can know

DIRECT HEATING.

THERE is something to be said in favor of direct heating, that is, by means of open fires, gas burners, and stoves. From the health standpoint the principal advantage is because of radiant heat. In certain circumstances heat shoots out into the air in a way that may be compared loosely to the way lightning flashes out. It is a quality, if not a something that actually passes somehow from the fire where it started outward, through the air and on to the person exposed to it.

Radiant heat has a physiologic effect that is not produced by other forms of heat. Arctic explorers caught in the polar region during the long night have been saved by standing naked in front of an open fire and absorbing radiant heat through the skin.

Another advantage of direct heating is the small initial cost. It is not possible to hang enough embroidery on a stove or to foolishly bedeck a gas grate enough to bring the first cost to the level of that of a central heating plant.

But if it is inexpensive to start with it ends by being very expensive. An open fire sends most of the heat up the chimney and much of the coal and combustion gases go the same way. The coal, wood, or gas bill will offset the extra cost of a central heating plant in a few years of use. Keeping up fires is troublesome and backbreaking.

An open fire or a stove is a dust breeder. Smoke gets into the air and blackens the curtains and ash dust goes everywhere. Stoves and fires always leak unburned gases into the room, sometimes more, sometimes less. There is some production of carbon monoxide—more in gas grates and stoves and less in open fires. The newer style of gas grates with but few openings and those properly placed and with no openings hid by asbestos are much safer than those of the older type in this regard.

It is fairly easy to humidify the air with stove heat, but very difficult to do so with grate open fire heat.

There is a basis for social intercourse in pulling up around the fire and this makes the method appealing. But offsetting it is the fact that the only warm place in the room is around the fire. One pays for warmth in front with a cold back, and the floors are always cold. The open fire leads all other forms of heating when it comes to cold floors.

AVOIDS GLASSES.

V. L. S. writes: When I was 20 to 22 years old I worked pretty hard, using my eyes severely. An oculist insisted I wear glasses after my initial attack of headache, which was sudden in onset, extremely painful, and accompanied by near prostration. My father and a doctor, who was a friend, insisted I needed only a physical and a mental rest. This I took. I think I had three such attacks in two years. Then some friend suggested that I form the habit of changing the focus at intervals of five minutes, get up and walk around, step out of doors, do anything to shift the focus. I did form that habit and follow it without thinking. I have never worn glasses, have no more "migraine," and hope my eyes are good for many years to come.

HEAD LICE.

Mrs. C. K. writes: My little girl got head lice from some of the children at school. Will you please tell me a quick and sure way of getting rid of the lice and the eggs?

REPLY.

Wash the hair with kerosene. After half an hour remove it. This kills or drives out the insects.

Wash the hair with warm vinegar. Comb out the nits. This removes the eggs. When you apply kerosene avoid all fires and open lights. Also be careful that the insects do not escape into the clothing and later return to the head. Be careful of the child's associates, lest she be reinfested. There is an old saying, "Evil communications spread insects," or something like that.

MILD HEMORRHOIDS.

A. H. L. writes: For many years, at intervals of perhaps a year or so, one side of my rectum protrudes like a small marble. After salving this for several days it disappears. There does not seem to be any infection; it is not especially painful, but it is annoying. What causes this condition?

REPLY.

You seem to have a mild case of hemorrhoids. The description rather fits external hemorrhoids.

SEES COLORED LIGHTS.

Mrs. C. W. H. writes: I am a woman 46 years old and the mother of three boys—17, 12, and 11 years respectively. Two or three times a month I see colored lights floating along. When I see them I lie down for about 10 minutes and, when I do, they disappear. I feel tired the next day. What does this mean?

REPLY.

Petit mal is the best guess. Migraine is possible. Glaucoma may be the cause. The symptom, as you give it, is important enough to call for investigation.

INGROWING TOENAILS.

M. M. writes: Tell me how to treat ingrowing toenails. The great toe is sore and swollen on the inner side at the end.

REPLY.

Wear broad toed shoes. Put a bit of cotton under the ingrowing corner. By slightly increasing the size of this bit you will finally lift the nail out of the rut. When you do, the soreness will end. The objective is to straighten the nail on the toe and the toe on the foot.

DECEASED'S ASSETS.

Morrison, Ill., Feb. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If a will has been probated and the heir, wife of the deceased husband, has found a bank book with an account she never knew about can she draw this money from the bank, as it was deposited in her husband's name?

W. J. B.

Yes, unless liability has been barred by the statute of limitations. In any event, it would be worth taking up with the bank, since they may be willing to take it up voluntarily. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORTGAGE RENEWAL.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—We hold a mortgage on a bungalow which expires March 3, 1933. The people who own same cannot pay either principal or interest and also owe us $60 fire insurance money. The mortgage on our home comes due March 14, and because of the other fellow's inability to pay we are forced to have our mortgage renewed at 5 per cent. May we charge 5 per cent on the other fellow's renewal? It is his fault we have to renew ours, and my husband has had no work for two years. A. P. G.

When the mortgage which you hold comes due you can name any terms that you choose within the usury limits. If on either mortgage the so-called commission is being charged by the holder himself so that in effect it is merely another name for interest and if the sum of the interest proper plus the interest that is called a commission exceeds 7 per cent per annum for the full term of the renewal, then the mortgage holder would not be in a position to collect more than his principal.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOTE.

Oak Park, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A is heir to property which consists of homestead and vacant land. There is a trust deed against the vacant land signed by the deceased and the heir. 1. B is suing A to recover amount of the note. 2. If A conveys her interest after suit has been started can transfer be set aside? 3. If B gets judgment against A can B garnishee A's widow's award? 4. Will homestead rights prevent us from attaching her interest? 5. When settling estate does widow's award come before creditors' claims? 6. If property is forfeited to the state for taxes and assessments what effect will that have on the mortgage? R. T.

1. We assume that you mean that B is owner of a note secured by a trust deed.
2. The holder of the note and trust deed would still be in a position to foreclose.
3. No basis for a personal judgment against A appears on the bare facts stated.
4. We assume that "us" refers to B. If B is bringing personal suit on the note, and if A has in some way incurred liability on the note, then homestead might be material.
5. Yes.
6. It would be a cloud on the title so as to be objectionable to the mortgage holder.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 23, 1917.

WASHINGTON.—The arm of Uncle Sam swung into action to break the menacing grip of hunger on the nation's poor. Practically every branch of the federal government bent its energies to the task of checking the upward climb of prices, which has reached its climax in food riots in several of the country's larger cities. At the capitol there was a great deal of activity. A group of Republican senators in conference discussed the advisability of asking congress to appropriate $50,000,000 to feed the poor. The concrete developments of the day here may be summarized as follows: Representative London of New York introduced a measure for the creation of an emergency food commission to assist the poor. Congressmen Siegel of New York and Bailey of Pennsylvania introduced resolutions urging an embargo on all food products. A letter signed by ten congressmen was addressed to every member of the house demanding the immediate appropriation for the federal trade commission of the $400,000 asked to conduct the food inquiry recently ordered by the President. The department of justice started an investigation to determine whether pro-German propagandists were back of the food riots.

WASHINGTON. — The attempt to confer indirectly upon President Wilson blanket authority to employ the armed forces of the United States in almost any manner he sees fit in the submarine controversy with Germany failed in congress today. The senate committee on judiciary refused to report the bill, the passage of which was urged two days ago by Secretary of State Lansing and the department of justice. As a result President Wilson, if he still desires express authority to protect Americans from submarine warfare, will be compelled to seek the specific legislation. It is also apparent that there is little prospect of the enactment of such legislation on the basis of the existing circumstances of the German submarine campaign, unless the President goes to congress and unequivocally requests authority to arm American merchantmen or to employ the armed forces of the United States to protect Americans and American ships.

NEW YORK.—Reports that the big White Star line steamship Celtic, 20,904 tons, had hit a mine Feb. 14 and was towed back into Liverpool in a damaged condition were brought here by passengers on the American line steamship Philadelphia. The Philadelphia, the passengers said, sailed about thirty minutes after the Celtic and the British steamship Canada, a troopship. Wireless calls from the Celtic asking for aid are said to have been picked up by the radio operators of the American liner, which, however, did not respond, as the Canada was already reported to have reached it. The Canada, it was said, towed the Celtic back to Liverpool.

WAR SUMMARY. — Paris reports the repulse of a German sortie on the left bank of the Meuse. London says enemy attempts to advance near Neuve Chapelle failed. Berlin chronicles the defeat of the British south of Armentieres. The Russians were beaten back southwest of Riga, Berlin says. The Germans attacked in dense formation northwest of Dorna Watra, in the Rumanian theater, but failed in their attempts, Petrograd reports. Britain arrested Sinn Fein leaders in Ireland under defense of realm act. German diplomats expect Austria's reply to President Wilson's note to carry full discussion and defense of submarine warfare. Eight ships were sunk by German submarines yesterday. The total since Feb. 1 now stands at 140 ships sunk, with a total tonnage of 321,579.

CHICAGO. — Mrs. Eleanor Kinzie Gordon, "Chicago's eldest daughter," died at her home in Savannah, Ga. She was the fifth white child born in Chicago, the oldest living native Chicagoan, and the granddaughter of John Kinzie, Chicago's first settler, who built a log cabin on the north bank of the river in 1804. Mrs. Gordon was 81 years old. John Kinzie, Mrs. Gordon's grandfather, was a native of Parc aux Vaches. He came to Chicago as a trapper and fur trader, and built the fourth log cabin here. His son, John H. Kinzie, married Mrs. Juliette A. Magill in 1830, and after being hurried about the government service for three years they came to Chicago in 1834, where "Nellie" Kinzie was born the next year.

EARNED RELIEF IN DANVILLE.

Danville, Ill., Feb. 20.—Most of the unfortunates receiving relief do not want charity—they want work. I am a member of the board of supervisors in Vermilion county. I am chairman of the public buildings and grounds committee. About one year ago the board asked for bids to clean up and wash the rooms in the courthouse at Danville. The lowest estimate was around $11,000. About two months ago we undertook this job with unemployed labor that was receiving relief from the county. And I want to tell you it was a pleasure to see these men and women work. They were tickled to death to work. One relief order of $3 per day was allowed to one person per week and by next week the courthouse will be finished, saving the taxpayers about $10,700.

Of course you understand this was not done against the wishes of organized labor. I myself am a union man—and have been since I was 18 years old. The reason I am writing you this is that perhaps your board could do the same as we have done without putting more burdens on the taxpayers.

CONVEYORS IN THE NEW POSTOFFICE.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—No doubt you know we have a new postoffice and that it is a credit to Chicago; also that they have a new conveyor system for the new postoffice to take care of the parcel post.

Well, what I would like to know [and I suppose a great many other firms in Chicago] is why they did not test out the new conveyor with less expensive material than the general run of parcel post that would be delivered to them for shipment.

About the first part of last week we began receiving notice from the "Nixie" section of the postoffice that they had 6 cartons that were received in bad order and to come and get them, and when we did you should have seen the mess. Books tied up with a string, cartons all broken to pieces and most of the names and addresses missing. Most all that week we were receiving other notices to the same effect until we have up to this time received twenty-seven cartons of schoolbooks that have been damaged, lost and otherwise mistreated at a big loss to us, and we are informed that the government is not responsible.

Most any other form of transportation would take this matter up with the firm and settle the damages claimed, but not the government. What we were told was to make out our bill, send it to the postoffice, and the chances were that we would not get anything for our trouble and the investigation would take from five to six months. The postoffice department knows just what happened to the conveyor and it is their fault that they did not stop the conveyor when they saw the damage being done to the parcel post. SHIPPING CLERK.

SNOW SHOVELERS.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—I was gratified to read your editorial in this morning's paper in regard to "Snow, but No Snow Shovelers."

I have made inquiry and find that men can be had for this work from the work relief committee of Cook county for 25 cents an hour, with an additional 25 cents for luncheon when they do a full eight hour day's work. These men will be provided with shovels. The office is located at 310 West Madison street [telephone Franklin 2474].

A sufficient sum could easily be raised by people living on one block to pay for two men to work a couple of days and clear the streets. In this emergency, for their own comfort in walking, to save wear and tear on automobiles, not to mention civic pride, I am sure many householders would be willing to join together and contribute toward such a fund in order to get their own block cleared. Incidentally, I am personally paying a man to clear the gutters along Prairie avenue in this vicinity.

THE INTERNATIONAL SCIENTIFIC CATALOGUE.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 20.—May I appeal for the hospitality of your columns in aid of a great international public service?

In 1901 the international catalogue of the world's scientific literature began to be published by coöperation of some 33 bureaus representing the principal countries of the world. Each bureau furnished at its own expense to the central publishing bureau in London classified references to the entire scientific literature of its region.

The catalogue was organized and promoted by some of the most eminent men of science and bibliographers of that day. It solved the problem of publishing a complete condensed digest and index of the world's current scientific literature.

The world war stopped the publication of the catalogue. Hitherto efforts to revive it have failed. Yet the backbone of the undertaking, worth several hundred thousand dollars a year, namely, international coöperation of numerous self-supporting classifying bureaus, is still available.

The Smithsonian institution has worked out a new science of publication which has received expert approval. It requires initially a fund of $75,000. Afterwards the publishing costs would be covered by the receipts from 1,000 subscriptions to the complete catalogue. Briefly, the offer would be to furnish promptly a classified current index catalogue to the world's literature of science at a price of $50 per year.

It would be difficult to find an object more worthy of endowment than this unique international coöperative organization.

The Smithsonian institution hereby appeals to any of your interested readers to join in a subscription to reach $75,000 to put this scheme on its feet. Subscriptions will be acknowledged by the institution. They will be returned in full to the donors should it prove impossible to secure the necessary number of subscribers either to the endowment or to the catalogue. In other words, subscriptions in any amount from $100 to $75,000 are invited, conditional on the success of an effort to obtain the necessary number of subscribers and returnable in full by the Smithsonian institution should the effort fail. The institution will be glad to furnish detailed information to any one interested. C. G. ABBOT,

Secretary, Smithsonian Institution.

THE RIGHT TO GO ARMED.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—I have read with interest Justice O'Connor's letter to THE TRIBUNE and heartily agree with him in theory. In this day and age concealed weapons are not a necessity in any lawful enterprise, excepting as they are used as protection against the criminal. If the criminal element of society could be disarmed there would be no reason for the existence of such weapons.

However, can the criminal be disarmed? Will any law regulating the sale or possession of concealed weapons act as a deterrent to a man who lives by breaking laws? Many states already have such laws, but to what effect? Acts of violence have not disappeared. How many criminals who have been arrested in the violation of these laws have been indicted or, if indicted, have been unable to grasp some convenient legal technicality recognized by our courts?

The lawbreaker will secure his concealed weapons regardless; why, therefore, handicap John Citizen by passing laws that he alone will respect? I cannot believe that our modern bandit would so lightly consider a holdup, kidnaping, or murder, if he knew that the party of the second part might be in a position to fight back on an equal footing. SCAN 58 MILLION IDLE FOOD BILL FOR TAX "LEAKS"

Slight Waste Soon Runs Into Big Item.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Cook county's bill for food alone distributed to needy families from public funds is likely to run about $58,000,000 this year, and this is the item deemed most susceptible of waste to the taxpayers.

Between 160,000 and 170,000 families are now "on the relief" in the county and the average expenditure is given as $29.10 a month for each family. Taking the county bureau's figure of an average of 3½ persons to a family, it would mean that between 560,000 and 600,000 individuals are cared for through public family relief in addition to those given help at the shelters and through private agencies.

800,000 Idle Workers.

About 5,600 families a month are dropping from the lists as jobs are obtained, but others take their places and the total case count is constantly growing. Its net increase in December was 9,099. The present number of idle workers in Chicago is estimated by the emergency relief at about 800,000, which would be about one-half the workers over 10 years old gainfully employed in the city in normal times.

With relief sums now soaring into enormous totals and the call for aid still growing, the query is being pressed whether the budgets for family relief contain tax waste either in the form of prices or in the amount of the dole. Smaller taxpayers are now beginning to interest themselves in the matter.

Professional Social Workers.

It brings up a rather delicate question, which concerns the dominance which the professional social welfare group appears to exert in the disbursement of the relief from public funds. Critics assert that the welfare workers are too prone to set the relief distribution on the basis of an "ideal system," that was well enough in the boom days when nobody worried about costs. The welfare workers, it is argued, have been more concerned in the spending end of the problem than in the question of where the money is coming from.

The critics say the problem now is to apply the methods of modern big business, as well as the ideas of the welfare group, to relief which is now on a mass production basis, the full cost for Cook county this year being estimated at no less than $80,000,000.

Public relief funds are now being administered through the county bureau of public welfare, which is regarded as having done a good job so far in the face of a tremendous increase in the relief load.

The Dominating Voice.

The professional social welfare group it seems has the dominating voice, both in setting up the machinery and in getting up the family relief budgets. The personnel committee, which the workers are fond of terming a quasi "civil service commission," in effect governs the selection of the staff.

This "civil service commission" has eight members. Four of them are college professors and two of them are professional social workers. Two of them are personnel directors from large private employing concerns. It has led to criticism from some quarters that it gives the colleges and the professional welfare group too large a voice and too much of a chance, if it saw fit, to apply "closed shop" ideas in the selection of the professional staff. On the other hand, the welfare group point out, it has served to put up the bars against politicians.

Experts Prepare Budgets.

The family relief budgets are prepared by professional experts. As explained by Director Joseph L. Moss, the committee on the Chicago standard budget for dependent families took for its basis the standard of the dieticians set up by the United States children's bureau and the bureau of home economics of the department of agriculture.

In other states and cities which have set up relief machinery, it has been a common practice to apply, with variations, the sample diets at minimum cost put out by the federal bureaus. They aim at a balanced diet.

Difference in Costs.

Here, however, appears a difference in cost in various localities. Pennsylvania, in its community market system which has been set up on York and Williamsport, has adapted the relief plan of John H. Leavell of Tulsa, Okla., which it is claimed costs only 9.62 cents a day per person, including all overhead. In Cook county for family relief the cost is running about 22 cents a day per person given relief.

In Elgin, which has no commissary but operates through local stores, the average food cost per family in January was $9.38. In Cook county it was $29.10. The Elgin workers report their budgets were of the best food and well balanced according to accepted standards.

Some of the social engineers argue that this matter of the budgets is the spot to watch most closely to guard against waste. How fast a small percentage of waste runs up the bill against the taxpayer is pointed out to in connection with the huge growth of the relief sums.

More Than Corporate Budget.

In Cook county the full cost of publicly paid relief is expected to reach $80,000,000 this year. Last year the sum was $45,460,000 of funds borrowed from state and federal agencies. Of the $80,000,000, about $58,00,000 appears likely to be spent on food alone. This is more than the corporate budget for the city of Chicago [from taxes] which is estimated at $43,032,000 this year.

The engineers point out that a waste of only 1 per cent on the food bill would run up to $580,000; a 10 per cent waste would mean nearly six million dollars, while a 20 per cent waste would amount to $11,600,000 a year—all borne by the taxpayers.

HARVARD BOYS 'SCOOP' WORLD ON NEW PRESIDENT

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—The Harvard Lampoon, undergraduate comic publication, today staged one of its best pranks in years by printing and distributing to subscribers and newsstands a bogus edition of the Harvard Crimson, the college daily, carrying the astounding news "scoop" that Dr. Henry Eliot Clarke, '04, of Evanston, Ill., had been chosen as the new president of Harvard college to succeed Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, whose resignation was submitted on Nov. 21, 1932, to take effect with the close of the present academic year.

The "scoop" was complete down to the last detail, and so plausible that even the Associated Press fell for it and bulletined the news before discovery that Dr. Henry Eliot Clarke is a fictitious person and that the whole edition was the work of Harvard funsters.

The fake Crimson carried the lead story of the appointment by the Harvard overseers under a five column streamer. There was a special story from President Elect Roosevelt, supposed classmate of Clarke, congratulating the university on its choice. There were comments from the heads of many other universities and leaders in business and industry throughout the country. Among the stories was a biographical sketch of the new "president," listing his many activities as a midwest bank director and vice president of a Chicago meat packing firm, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, and director of the coming Century of Progress World's Fair.

While the Crimson officers were denying they had printed the paper, the Lampoon calmly announced it is entirely to blame.

TRUCE TO MAY 1 IN MILK STRIKE IN WISCONSIN

Farmers Respond to Plea of Governor.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—A truce in the milk strike to be effective until May 1 at least, was voted late today by several thousand farmers and their leaders at the plea of Gov. A. G. Schmedeman.

Immediately word was sent out to withdraw all pickets from the roads so that uninterrupted delivery of milk could be resumed to Milwaukee and other centers whose supplies were reported to be low. Fear was expressed that pickets in the more remote sections would not be reached, and some delay might result in the morning.

The calling off of the milk strike climaxed a day of varied activities, in which the strikers made effective gestures in several counties, particularly at Waukesha. Milk dumping continued—even after the signing of the truce. Waukesha was virtually in the hands of strikers as a crowd of farmers and their sympathizers successfully stopped milk shipments by electric trains, and halted a Milwaukee railroad train.

Train Held Up.

As yesterday ,the Waukesha movement centered at the Calhoun crossing, east of the city. The strikers swarmed on the electric tracks, held up several trains, and searched them for milk.

Finding none, the strikers gathered at the terminal. They rushed the big gate, unawed by armed deputies, but dispersed as water streams were turned upon them. However, the demonstration prompted the electric line officials to announce they would not attempt any milk shipments without augmented protection.

Defy Dodge Sheriff.

At Mayville several hundred farmers defied Sheriff Henry Lehmann of Dodge county and his five deputies when he ordered them to cease dumping milk. The sheriff hurried to Juneau, deputized 200 men, many of them recipients of county charity, and returned to Mayville. He arrested 83 of the strikers.

Elsewhere the situation was similar, but on a smaller scale. Throughout, however, it appeared the strikers are winning.

This fact was considered by the farmers at the Madison meeting, but they were disposed to let go of a potential victory on the plea of the governor. Gov. Schmedeman told the farmers that the incoming Democratic administration should be given a clear chance to redeem its pledge to help the farmer.

He said that President Elect Roosevelt had promised him a conference on Wisconsin's plight. The farmers, in their resolution temporarily halting the strike, threatened a national agricultural tieup if the new administration failed in its promises.

If griddle cakes don't get an even heat, they'll be leathery and pale in places—burned almost black in other places—soggy in other places. Fluffy, golden-tan, tender griddle cakes need an even, steady heat on both sides. You couldn't get that with a candle!

Nothing but an even distribution of heat will cook food or roast coffee to uniform perfection.

In Hills Bros.' exclusive process—Controlled Roasting—even distribution of heat is assured. As the blend flows evenly, continuously through the roasters—a little at a time—a constant degree of heat roasts every berry alike. There is no variation. Each pound has a matchless, uniform flavor.

Such uniformity in flavor cannot be achieved in coffee roasted in bulk—the ordinary way. It is impossible to roast each batch alike, and as a result there is variation in flavor.

The vacuum process of packing coffee, originated by Hills Bros. in 1900, is the only method that fully preserves coffee freshness—the air is removed from the can and kept out. There is no magic about a vacuum can—it will not make poor coffee good, but it will keep good coffee fresh. No can of Hills Bros. Coffee will ever "go stale." The vacuum can keeps it fresh always!

No coffee, however good, can be uniform in taste unless uniformly roasted and uniformly ground. Hills Bros.' exclusive, continuous process—Controlled Roasting—and correct granulation insure this uniformity. Hills Bros.' granulation will give best results by the drip process or any other method.

DOCTORS PUSH FIGHT ON LOW COST CLINICS

Corporate Practice Case in Court Today.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Organized medicine has taken the offensive all along the line in Chicago against the practice of medicine by groups in which laymen are interested as a business proposition. In court and through influence in hospitals and other institutions the orthodox doctors are engaged in what they consider a great ethical battle. The opposition answer is that the doctors have failed to do anything to lower the costs of medicine to low income groups, particularly in this depression period, and that the time has come to practice group medicine or take the road toward state medicine.

The attack of organized medicine now is directed against the United Medical Service, Inc., 25 East Jackson boulevard, an organization of doctors and laymen which opened last month. The battle is described as "just a little skirmish" by Brig. Gen. James A Ryan, U. S. A. (retired), vice president and treasurer of the United Medical Service, in general charge of the legal tactics.

Dr. Schmidt Interested.

On the sidelines, greatly interested in this experiment in low cost clinics, is Dr. Louis E. Schmidt, who has been declared "unethical" by the Chicago Medical society because of his connection with the Illinois Social Hygiene league and its receiving of patients from the Public Health institute.

Dr. Schmidt, who is connected with leading medical organizations in this country and abroad and who has been senior urologist at St. Luke's hospital for 20 years, has been informed that the Chicago Medical society has asked a committee to meet with a committee of the Chicago Hospital association to discuss the question of physicians who have been branded as "unethical" serving on hospital staffs. This would be an indirect way of removing him from his hospital position.

"I am interested solely in the principle of the thing," he said. "Whether a clinic is organized for profit or nonprofit means nothing at all to me. A nonprofit organization may give bad service. I do not see how it is possible for the medical profession to continue obstructive tactics and refuse to help the public at this time."

Report Zeisler Penalized.

Dr. Ernest Bloomfield Zeisler, graduate of the University of Chicago and Rush Medical, who also has done postgraduate work in Vienna, has already been penalized, it is reported, for his connection with United Medical Service, where he is in charge of general medicine. He was removed from the teaching staff of Northwestern university medical school by order of Dean Irving S. Cutter. Dr. L. J. Goodman another Rush graduate with European post-graduate experience, specialist in obstetrics and gynecology, was also removed from a position at the Northwestern institution.

"This is to advise you," Dean Cutter wrote, "that upon proper recommendation your appointment as clinical assistant in obstetrics and gynecology on the Northwestern medical faculty has been canceled. May I express our appreciation to you for past service."

Eight of the 22 physicians connected with the United Medical service in a direct salary way are summoned to appear before the ethical conduct committee of the Chicago Medical society.

This morning, in Judge Charles H. Miller's court, arguments will be heard in the proceedings brought against the American Society for Conservation of Vision for the corporate practice of medicine. Attorney Angus Roy Shannon will appear as a "friend of the court" to argue the case. He is attorney for the United Medical service. If corporation practice of medicine is prohibited in Illinois, many hospital clinics will be affected, according to his argument. Attorney Harry Eugene Kelly is acting as special prosecutor on behalf of the Chicago Medical society.

A recommendation that corporations organized for profit be prohibited from the practice of dentistry in Illinois has been made in a committee report to the Chicago Dental society. Dr. Frederick B. Noyes, dean of the University of Illinois school of dentistry, declared that corporation practice was "detrimental to the interests of society."

PROTESTS FREE PUBLICATION OF RADIO PROGRAMS

A resolution protesting the free publication of radio programs in newspapers was adopted yesterday during the closing sessions of the annual convention of the Inland Daily Press association in the Morrison hotel. The resolution urged that free printing of such programs be discontinued and that they be treated only as advertising matter.

The association at the same time, by a vote of 21 to 18, tabled the resolution against the radio broadcasting of news gathered by press associations. In making the motion to table the resolution, Fred Schilplin, publisher of the Times-Journal of St. Cloud, Minn., chairman of the board of directors of the association, declared the resolution had been read without the sanction of E. H. Harris, publisher of the Richmond, Ind., Palladium-Item. Mr. Harris is chairman of the radio committees of both the Inland Daily Press association and the American Newspaper Publishers' association.

Mr. Harris, although opposed to stopping absolutely the radio stations from broadcasting information obtained by press associations, said he was in favor of regulating this practice so that only news of great importance would be broadcast in brief bulletin form, word for word as submitted by newspapers. The matter of news broadcasts will be considered, he said, at the annual business meeting of the Associated Press in New York in April.

C. R. Butler of the Mankato, Minn., Press, was elected president of the association, succeeding A. O. Lindsay of the Herald-Whig of Quincy, Ill., who became chairman of the board.

Msgr. Cloutier, Official of Quebec Archdiocese, Dies

QUEBEC, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Msgr. Omer Cloutier, honorary vicar general of the archdiocese of Quebec, died today at the age of 66.

FAT is the Mask that Hides Your Beauty

In youth, most all women are naturally endowed with beautiful figures—figures that could be retained throughout life. But because the body lacks a simple element necessary to turn food into energy, unsightly fat creeps over their lines, robbing them of beauty, "pep" and the magnetic attraction of slender lines.

How unnecessary! For science has found a simple way to control excess weight. That way is Marmola!

Marmola acts on the same principles that specialists use in treating cases of obesity. It supplies the element the body itself uses. Food goes into energy and vim instead of being stored as excess fat. That's why Marmola actually does take off weight—why most women usually say they feel better than they have felt in years when taking Marmola.

If you are overweight, you owe it to yourself to regain your youthful slenderness. You don't have to overexercise or go on a starvation diet, cut down the excessive use of fats and starches. All you do is take four tablets each day. And when your weight is where you want it, just stop.

Don't tolerate excess fat a day longer! Go to your druggist now and get Marmola. A book that you will find in every package gives full details.

Military Ball Revived After Many Years

Army Relief Society Benefit Is Great Success.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

GOLD braid and medals, ermine wraps and family jewels mingled last night in a setting of military splendor at the first Army ball Chicago has known in two decades. With all of the pomp and brilliancy of pre-war days, Maj. Gen. Frank Parker and Mrs. Parker and the other officers of the regular army and their ladies received more than 700 guests at the Army and Navy club in the Lake Shore Athletic club building.

From the stroke of 9 o'clock, when the receiving line formed, until half after midnight, when the band played "Home, Sweet Home," the affair moved off with all the precision of military form. The guests filed through a canopy decorated at its entrance with two large American flags, and on into the large ballroom resplendent with guns and flags. Because of the unexpected number of officers and ladies the grand march scheduled for 11 o'clock was abandoned.

There was a reminder of former Army balls in the military band from Fort Sheridan and the absence of cigaret girls. A group of young women, many of them daughters of officers, assisted throughout the evening, but a cigaret vendor was not in evidence. Among the assistants were Miss Anne Parker, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Parker; Miss Kathleen Graham and Miss Mayme Graham, daughters of Gen. Parker's new chief of staff, Col. James M. Graham and Mrs. Graham, and Miss Cynthia Cooke, Miss Betty Hill, Miss Jean Jordan, and Miss Devin Sultan.

Dances such as the John Paul Jones—the fast two step that derives its name from the famous commander because of the speed with which he changed his mind—broke the formality of the dance program at frequent intervals during the evening. For those who preferred not to dance there were bridge tables in the rooms of the Army and Navy club with 300 prizes ranging from a turkey to a chaise lcague for awards. Col. George T. Langhorne, president of the Army and Navy club, and Mrs. Langhorne were host and hostess in the bridge rooms.

Mrs. Arthur A. Small was looking particularly radiant last night, for she appreciated the many dollars that were going to further the work of the Army Relief society, the beneficiary of the party. Mrs. Small is vice president of the national society.

Many of the guests last night came to the ball from the "Tosca" performance at the Auditorium. Observed during the evening were Col. and Mrs. Harry D. Mitchell, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Wat T. Cluverius, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank C. Bolles, Mrs. William H. Hubbard, president of the Chicago Branch of the Army Relief society; Col. and Mrs. William N. Pelouze, Mrs. Harry H. Shearson, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Capt. Maxwell M. Corpening, Brig. Gen. James A. Ryan, Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Frank R. Schwengel. Mrs. Mitchell worked several weeks as general chairman of the party.

Stores Taking Mystery Out of Needle Art

One Way to Acquire Frock Is to Make It.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

One way to acquire a new frock is to make the thing yourself. If you haven't wangled a pattern, a pair of trusty shears, some four or five yards of silk or wool into a good looking creation by this time it must be because you are either unfashionably lazy or else unbelievably unambitious.

If a nice, folded, well printed pattern is unintelligible, if sleeves are an unexplained mystery as to how to assemble them into a prescribed armhole, and even a needle and thread seem difficult to manage, you can still "make your own."

Certain obliging stores have planned for shaky beginners and much floor space is available with plenty of smooth tables, good lights, and instructors who really know all about bias seams, tucks, godets, pleats, silhouettes, intricate collars, and all the trick little doodads that are used in a dress.

You wander around and select the material, you linger over a pattern book, make your final decisions, and after your purchases are completed and a small fee is paid the fun begins. In no time at all you begin to feel that you have the talents of a master designer, your frock begins to look like something; at last the great day arrives and you carry it home fairly bursting with pardonable pride over your new accomplishment.

It isn't a bit too early to buy cottons or prints. You will find a grand assortment of silk prints that will make your fingers twitch to cut and fashion, and quite the newest duet is called "twin prints." A smart, small pattern of white is splashed against a scarlet background, while its twin is a red pattern printed on white. One is used for the dress or skirt, the other for the jacket or coat. Lovely hyacinth blue backgrounds are newly printed with pale brown designs, with a good looking twin of brown with hyacinth blue design. Another jade green with black is twinned with a black print with jade green designs.

Pale gray prints with white designs against a silvery gray are uncommonly good to use for interesting frocks. Some of the modernistic designs with long curving lines of white are perfect for delightful coat and jacket linings. Old gold and black combinations with the designs small and precise are new arrivals, and watch for the first showings of foulards, that old-new silk that is so good for draped frocks, smart daytime tailored ensembles, and blouses with lots of softly tied bows.

Again you are going to be able to shop and find practically every known shade of blue. Among the shades are good true blue navy, deep sapphire blue, especially attractive tones of cornflower blue, and lovely, ducky old blues that combine so well with contrasting shades. After blue you will see yellow, quantities of all tints of this very smart color . . . bright canary yellows, pale citron shades, green yellows, and deep butter yellows that are just a trifle lighter than burnished gold.

Evening prints are positively edible. The colors are pale mint greens, bonbon shades of grape, rose, pink, mauve, and yellow. Then there are white backgrounds with cerise and sapphire circles combined with jagged outlined circles of silver gray. Quaint nosegays with blurred outlines are printed on soft watered silks like chiffon taffeta, and lots of satin striped taffetas are ready for the gal that likes to fashion her own creations for a successful party.

Curved Lines Necessary to Beauty in 1933

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

The curved line of female beauty is now an established tradition among 1933 beauty seekers. Hips are slim and flat, of course, but the bust line must be developed—a fact, I gather, that women recognize perfectly, from the increasing inquiries I receive about this form of silhouette perfection.

The problem of the perfect curved line of bust divides itself into two groups of figures, one with overdeveloped busts and those with underdeveloped. In the later case there is, almost to a woman, a preliminary problem of better health attainment, better vitality, which can be gained only through better nutrition.

The obvious step here is to overhaul the present diet and find just why it is not nutritional. One may be eating enough—often is—but not enough of the nutritional foods. Not enough strength-giving, fat-producing foods.

Milk in large quantities, but considered as food, is the best recommendation—and butter piled on everything it can possibly be taken on. Butter, you know, is the most easily assimilated of fats. A quart of milk a day is needed. Six glasses taken at space intervals are so much the better.

And fruits and vegetables are as necessary to weight gaining as they are in a reducing diet. They should be substitute foods for the thin, too. That is, a salad twice a day, two green vegetables and fruit for dessert are as valuable as an internal regulator with thin persons as with obese.

There's a third bust problem, grown out of the "boyish-form" hegira of a few seasons back. Many women in their effort to acquire this flatness succeeded in breaking down muscle and tissue with extremely tight brassieres. Today's brassieres, however, for both heavy and flat-busted women help immeasurably to restore the most beautiful line of the body.

And all three types will profit by this exercise, which brings the chest muscles into strong play. Push the arms forward on a level with the shoulders, sway them back and forth from side to side, stretching the body upwards on the intake of the breath. The breast intake is important, remember.

Costume Fete Is Given for Paula Wilms

Will Be Bride Today of Malcolm Henderson.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MISS PAULA WILMS isn't going to wear a traditional white bridal gown today when she becomes the bride of Malcolm Henderson, but last night at the bridal dinner given for her by her uncle and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Paepcke, she was a London bobby's bride in all the finery and grandeur that a pink cheeked, flaxed haired German fraulein in 1890 might have chosen to wear on her wedding day. White tarleton gown and veil and white daisies that came out of a "five and ten," instead of a field, comprised her wedding finery, and with the sword of her tall, handsome "bobby" she cut the wedding cake. The guests came in costumes to fit a British or German wedding.

It was a gay party, albeit a small one, and the Paepckes' chic apartment never looked lovelier than it did with decorations of red, white, and blue ribbons and streamers and white wedding bells and doves, although it was not with the idea of providing smart decorations that Mrs. Paepcke had chosen them. It was to provide a country wedding setting and a patriotic one, but much to the hostess' surprise the decorations were more attractive than they were amusing.

After a buffet dinner there was dancing and charades were played, with English proverbs pertaining to matrimony as the chief sources of fun. Some of those who enjoyed the Paepckes' hospitality were Miss Francise Clow, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose C. Cramer, the Philip Mahers, Lord and Lady Hastings, the Robert McCormick Adamses, Mr. and Mrs. George Senseney, Count and Countess Visconti, Miss Janet Fairbank, Miss Peggy Hambleton, and Arthur Meeker Jr., the last three arriving late, for they went to the opera first.

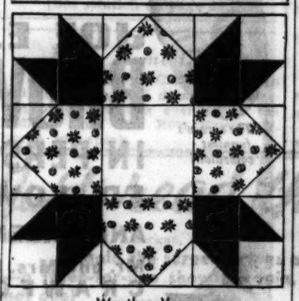
Quilt Retained Name and Form Through Years



Weather Vane.

The "Weather Vane" is a quilt block in its original form which still boasts its original name. There are few designs that can claim the same distinction.

The basic nine patch, discussed in connection with another pattern, is quite discernible here. It is only simply adorned.

Mrs. Goodspeed in Chic Costume.

Mrs. C. Barney Goodspeed added to her reputation as one of the best dressed women in society last night in a costume that was the last word in chic. It consisted of a flesh pink crêpe gown, the skirt very clinging and long, and a wide scarf of raspberry pink which formed a sort of jacket, crossing in front and tying in back. A cluster of roses of the same pale pink as the skirt were pinned

Brilliant Audience Hears 'Tosca' at Gala Benefit in Auditorium

Women's Board of Presbyterian Hospital Sponsors Performance; Opera Will Be Repeated Tomorrow.

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

IN the years when Chicago had its own opera company there usually was one night that was a gala enough occasion from a social standpoint to "cover" it so thoroughly as to publish an entire box list the next morning and that was the opening night each season, but now when the Auditorium theater has been dark for four years [until last December, when it was reopened with the Bohemians' concert] and there is no opera except on special occasions like this, it seems as if it is a gala enough affair to warrant such "covering" whenever society assembles en masse in the historic old theater for a notable musical event. How notable last night's production of "Tosca" was from a musical standpoint Mr. Moore will report in his column, but from a social standpoint it was decidedly a notable occasion.

It was the first time the woman's board of the Presbyterian hospital had staged a benefit in more than a quarter of a century and this fact alone would have insured its success, for some of society's most prominent families have counted the "Pres" among their pet philanthropies for several generations. It also was part of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the hospital and the public's response to the invitation to share in the birthday of this medical and surgical center was the more generous and warm-hearted probably because Presbyterian hospital benefits are so few and far between. Add to this the hunger of every opera lover [and there are many in spite of the jokes to the contrary] for an opera performance and you have a large and enthusiastic and fashionable audience, which is what filled the Auditorium last night.

Repeat Opera Tomorrow Night.

It was too soon—the opera will be repeated tomorrow night—for Mrs. C. Frederick Childs, chairman of the excutive committee, to estimate how much the hospital's percentage of the net proceeds will amount to, but she said the woman's board thought it would be more than they had dared hope it would be.

Mrs. Childs was sitting in one of the center boxes in the lower tier and she plans to occupy the same box tomorrow night. She was gowned in a lovely creation of chiffon with a background of black and a design in gold thread, flamingo pink and pale green, the neck outlined with a soft roll of flamingo pink velvet. Mrs. Childs' grandfather, Daniel A. Jones, left a bequest that made possible the construction of the Jones building in the hospital group in 1888, so she is a third generation friend of the hospital.

A young reporter remarked that it wasn't a brilliant audience last night but, as a seasoned society reporter, I take issue with that statement, for it was a brilliant audience if one judges by who was in the audience and by the beauty of the gowns worn by the women in the boxes and on the main floor.

It wasn't brilliant from the standpoint of the diamond horseshoe being the picture of flashing jewels that it was when it was given that name, for women today don't wear diamond necklaces and tiaras and all the other gorgeous jewelry that they did twenty years ago, but it was a brilliant audience just the same, with pearls as the favorite gems. Not an audience in which youth predominated, for there weren't many of the young married couples or the debutante set in the boxes or on the main floor, but there were many young people in the smartly clad throng that went upstairs beyond the boxes to the first balcony. Formal attire was in evidence there as well as downstairs.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The Auditorium was back in its old and honored estate last night, housing an operatic performance with tension in it, and thereby calling up a remembrance of the former days when there was a peculiarly exciting performance under the direction of Cleofonte Campanini.

A good part of the atmospheric electricity was caused by the first operatic appearance in Chicago of Mme. Jeritza. Her presence would seem to have cast something of a spell. It drew an audience which, if it did not completely fill the old house, would have been large enough at any time to create a beaming managerial smile, and it converted that audience into an army of enthusiasts, applauding with heated palms at the end of each act and after every notable musical number.

It was a wise move to let Chicago get its first operatic view of the temperamental Jeritza as the melodramatic Floria Tosca. Artist and rôle would seem to have been pretty well made for each other. Mme. Jeritza is a blonde beauty with a voice fit to cope with anything that Puccini wrote and with a singular personal ability to awaken and project the thrills which, as many times as it has been presented, are still lurking about the score of "Tosca."

She has not the slightest objection, lovely figure that she is, to being mussed up and trousled about where the opera calls for it. In the struggle of Scarpia in the second act her coronet fell off, her blonde hair went down her back, and she toppled to the floor. Then in that position she sang "Vissi d'arte," and the aria has seldom been anywhere nearly as effective, nor, for that matter, did the remainder of the act fall short.

One can admit with complete willingness, almost with complete indifference, that she frequently treated rhythms and conductor's beats with considerable disdain. She sang a phrase when she wanted and as she wanted, and let the rest of the performance take care of itself.

This is not necessarily a fault; that is, not for Jeritza. It might be for another soprano. But here was a personality, putting over a rôle in her own, possibly unconventional, way, but putting it over with complete logic and complete certainty; and gesture, pose of body, expression of face, and tone of voice all contributed to the impersonation.

If her vitality contributed to the vitality of the performance, she had some extremely able co-contributors as well. Mario Duca is a tenor who, with the right amount of luck and public appearances, ought to become one of the well known figures in opera. He is of fine physique and looks, and he has a voice with ringing vigor and good tone to match, a combination much to the point to make a striking Cavaradossi.

John Charles Thomas, who used to be popular at the Civic Opera house, had quite a good reason to be popular here. In some respects his Scarpia was as original as Mme. Jeritza's Tosca, and quite as able. For one thing, he is almost the only Scarpia in memory who has been able to keep his hands off Tosca until his violent struggle with her. One sees a succession of Scarpias pawing their Toscas until one wonders whether the art of climax has gone out of the world of baritones.

On the other hand, Mr. Thomas seemed to forget that hats are not usually worn in church, rather surprising for so stagewise a person. He would also have been the better for a heavier, more passion-ridden makeup, but elsewhere, vocally and visually, he was something to be remembered.

Let it not be forgotten that there was a perfect representation of a sly, clumsy sacristan by Vittorio Trevisan. That is, it would have been perfect if a new system of lighting the first act had not hidden the effect of his entrance. Isaac Van Grove conducted with force and fire, putting drama into the music and at the same time keeping it on a high level of dignity.

The performance will be repeated tomorrow night. It is thoroughly to be recommended.

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess is marooned in a catboat on Peconic Bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville. His companion, Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new-made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," rows to town and sends Bart help and taxies home. A girl in a canoe invites Bart over to her family's island. Bart learns that she is one of the Bayleys, who have lived in seclusion on the island fifteen years. The father travels. He invites the girl, Alice, to visit him in Wyattville. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. He confesses in a letter left for Bart to being a bigamist. The Bayleys of Folly Island are his second family. They know him as Matthew Bayley. He asks Bart, for his invalid mother's sake, to guard the secret, and leaves a fortune to provide for the Bayleys. Bart calls on Mrs. Bayley, posing as a lawyer, and finds her a lovely woman, not the harridan he expected. Bart is happy to learn from her mother that Alice isn't Matthew Bayley's daughter. But to keep her from visiting his home and seeing his father's pictures is now a problem. When Bart realizes he loves Alice he resolves to stay away from Folly Island. He sees a lot of Lora Sackett, a distant relative and recent divorcee, and soon finds himself unexpectedly engaged. The Bayleys visit New York, and Bart sees them. Ingy Warren has been visiting the island and has invited Alice to Wyattville. Bart tells Alice of his engagement. Ben Love, an eel catcher, long employed by the Bayleys, tries blackmail when he sees their newly acquired affluence. Ingy invites Alice and her mother to Wyattville for the annual flower show.

INSTALLMENT XXXIV.

THE LITTLE FLOWER GIRL.

"They're all goofy about Ingy's girl," Lora was whispering in his ear. "Old friend of yours, huh? The Warrens have taken them up, actually, my dear. They're staying with them for the week-end. Can you tie that? Of course Ma Warren'll drop them like a hot potato when——"

Bart was making no effort to hold back. Indeed, he was being drawn by some invisible magnet toward the girl in pink and the group that now surrounded her. There was Ingy Warren, a spot of plaid, and Aunt Augusta, a large blob of purple, and Mrs. Warren, a jetty oblong of black. And as Bart looked wildly around him he saw Mrs. Bayley, very formal in all white. She smiled over at him, caught his eye.

"How do you do?" asked his wooden lips.

"How do you do, Bart?" Friendly she was, even motherly. She might never have missed the photograph of the laughing hunter. "I hoped I'd see you here. And you see we took your advice about showing the flowers."

"My congratulation!" He was eager, too eager. "And this is Mrs. Sackett."

He had an impression of Lora's saying something droll about Ma Warren's presentation speech. . . . How Ma Warren scrambled her words so you couldn't tell whether the big tin cup was for the prettiest girl or the prettiest flowers.

"Oh—Bart." She spoke like some one awakened out of a dream, his beautiful, standing among the flowers.

"O, it's for the flowers," laughed Mrs. Bayley, looking half her age. "Bart, you remember my Watchung Sunrises?"

He had cause to remember them. "O, yes," he said out of the confusion that covered him.

"I was afraid they weren't going to blossom, but I coaxed them along. Alice arranged these." Indicating a cluster of glowing bubbles, reflecting sun colors against the wall.

"They are the finest I have ever seen," said Mrs. Wyatt Wainright. "Larger than any we can grow here."

"Do say a word to Alice," urged Mrs. Bayley, turning to Bart. "She's quite overcome, meeting so many people."

"O, we mustn't neglect Alice," tinkled Lora brightly. And as she dragged Bart toward the girl in pink she challenged gaily, "Quite a greenhouse on Folly island, hey, big boy?"

It was a full minute before Alice looked toward him, so absorbed was she in Aunt Augusta's lecture on botany. The picture of her, here in forbidden Wyattville, surrounded by the people she should never see and never know, awoke Bart to the full meaning of this mischievous situation. Ingy Warren had managed this. What for? How much did he know? Bart had an angry impulse to seize the girl bodily, drag her away, send her home with a bitter warning never to come back again, as she valued her peace of mind and his.

Just then she turned and saw him.

"O—Bart." She spoke like some one awakened out of a dream, standing among the flowers. Her cheeks had brightened, but already her eyes were beginning to cool.

"I'm glad you took a prize," he said, and was giddy with a memory of her.

"Thank you." Her tone was no more than friendly. He almost wished that she would blaze at him again, as she had that day, scorning him and all he stood for.

He introduced Lora.

"How do you do, Miss Bayley?"

The two touched hands; yes, and their eyes touched with the look that women can give, immediately understanding things that no man can tell them. Alice's eyes were saying, "So you're the girl, and you're very pretty." Lora's were asking, "And what are you to him that you should both act so queer?"

Lora was beginning to chatter when Aunt Augusta stepped in with a remark that chilled Bart again.

"Mrs. Burgess is president of the garden club, Miss Bayley, but she is unable—er—to be present. She is so interested in the fancy varieties. She asked me if I wouldn't bring the winner of the Trevor Burgess cup over to tea—informally, you know."

Bart found himself stepping forward, his mouth open to shout some silly warning. Alice stiffened a little, turned toward him, and her eyes caught his coolly. She hesitated. Was she going to accept? He was immensely relieved when Mrs. Warren, who had overheard, stepped in with her objection. Fondly she circled Alice's waist and said in her kittenish voice:

"We're having a tea party of our own this afternoon, aren't we, dear? But we'd just love it, Miss Forrester, if you'd drop in."

"Thank you so much," said Aunt Augusta, a little disappointed in not carrying out Mrs. Burgess' instructions.

"And, Bart, won't you bring Lora?" begged Mrs. Warren.

"Awfully sorry, but I promised mother I'd be back at five. But I'm sure Lora would love to come."

"You've said it for me," chirped his fiancée.

But Mrs. Warren, always insistent with her social programs, spoke wheedlingly. "But you are coming to our luncheon tomorrow. At the Country club. For Mrs. Bayley—and our little flower girl." With another squeeze at Alice's waist.

"I sort of promised to play golf at Shinnecock Hills, but if I can possibly get out of it——"

"Of course you can!" decided Mrs. Warren, and busied herself getting her party together.

Bart glanced over his shoulder, a pitiful, vain appeal. But the girl from Folly island was flirting with Ingy Warren, brightly laughing at his little jokes. Bart felt Lora's arm linked in his and she was pulling him toward the door.

"O, come on, big boy. What's the objection to tea and lunch and things?"

"You know I'm not going anywhere."

"You're going on a trip with me pretty soon."

"Yes, honey. But I mean till then——"

"You go places when you feel like it. Otherwise you're in mourning."

What was the girl driving at? Was she reading into his mind, studying his distracted thoughts? He wanted to be alone, to grope for some way out of this impossible situation. But Lora made one of her sudden attacks:

"Are you going to Shinnecock Hills because you're afraid of her?"

"Afraid of who?"

"Our little flower girl." Mocking Mrs. Warren.

"Think I'm crazy?" His lame defense.

She stuck out her tongue at him, and the funny face surprised him into a laugh. But his reply was almost savage.

"Look here. Of course I'm going to that luncheon. And so are you."

"Big, strong man!" But her face was revealing, somehow pitiful and sad, as she stood there, wondering what was the matter with him.

"Well, see you at the/club at one o'clock," she said lightly. "Oodle."

Then she sprang away to join Mrs. Warren's fast gathering party.

Colman Plans Movie Strike of Two Years

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 22.—Rather than make any more motion pictures for Sam Goldwyn, as producer, Ronald Colman is going to stay off the scene for the next two years. This, at least, is the last word reported to have been received from Colman at the Goldwyn headquarters.

If Colman persists it will be one of the most expensive grudges ever aired in Hollywood, for the actor will be losing, in salary, the better part of half a million dollars. Goldwyn, of course, will lose, too; for all Colman's films have been profit makers. It will be a real deprivation to filmgoers, for the dark haired Briton is certainly one of the most pleasing actors who ever graced the films, and in his last picture, "The Masquerader," for Goldwyn, Colman has added another to a series of box office successes.

The actor's grievance originated in a bit of publicity copy that came out of the Goldwyn offices, indicating that Colman steeled himself to play love scenes with beautiful movie actresses by first quaffing draughts of courage water. Colman said it wasn't so, because he didn't get stewed to make love, and he sued the Goldwyn corporation for $2,000,000, with the litigation still pending here, on the grounds that he had been slandered and damaged by publication of the idea.

Mr. Colman's manager, William Hawks, says Colman's plans are not definite as yet, and that the actor has not served any official notice on the producer. Under Colman's business arrangement with Goldwyn, he may stay off the screen for extended periods, if he so wishes, but he may not appear in films for anybody else until his contract with Goldwyn, which has a little more than two years to run, is fulfilled. Colman might go on the stage in New York or London.

Warners is taking eleven carefully chosen beauties on the "Forty-Second Street Special" train which left last night to carry officials and stars of that studio, to Washington for the Roosevelt inauguration, and later to New York for opening of the new Warner-First National picture, "Forty-Second Street."

Restless Wives Advised Not to Try Divorce

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Strange the way some married women keep on dreaming about the life of the free and independent divorcée's existence—just as if we were back in '23 when alimony getting was a flourishing racket.

Here's a woman, 43, with three children and no great cause for complaint against her mate, except as the colored woman said, "she's just done naturally lost her taste for the man." She's anxious to get a divorce, claiming she can have a good time if she's free, as she's still young looking, good looking, but hasn't many years left to step out.

There ought to be some sort of school established so that these silly women who refuse to face the realities of existence might be set right on their illusions. It would seem, however, that what the world is passing through at the moment were school enough if these women had brains to absorb its lessons.

The alimony racket isn't what it used to be, for one thing. Jobs for young, unattached women are extremely difficult to get, so that an untrained woman over 40 who thinks all she has to do is to duck home ties and apply at an unemployment bureau for a job and get it is due for a startling awakening. And it's no idle rumor that the married women's position in the working world is not what it was a couple of years back.

It's no time for changing jobs, we repeat. Unless a man is a brute, a menace to the children's welfare, we unqualifiedly advise married women to sit tight in the domestic saddle. Anyway, not to stir up a divorce case with the idea in the back of the mind of having a glorious fling. The "fling" days are over for the divorcée. The gayety of the life always was grossly exaggerated.

The loneliness of it is expressed in a letter before me at the moment, from one who signs herself "One of the Misfits!"

"It's a lonely life," she tells. "I was divorced at 30. At 30 one's girl friends are married and have their own interests. Other married women don't want the grass widow around. All this talk of trying to get big alimony is plain bunk. In nine cases out of ten, excepting in the wealthy class, perhaps, the woman isn't financially able to get along on it. I'm supporting a daughter of 10 on a stenographer's pay.

"And what you learn about men when you are divorce free isn't very cheering. That's why we divorcées are all anxious to run to matrimonial cover again the first chance that comes along."

DORIS BLAKE ANSWERS

Address Doris Blake, The Chicago Tribune, regarding problems of the heart. Enclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

It's Your Job to Win Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I like always has a dance with me and comes to our parties. Do you think he loves me? TERRY."

Having a dance with you wouldn't indicate love, but from here on you get in your best work with him, and maybe he'll grow to love you.

Costume Fete Is Given for Paula Wilms

Will Be Bride Today of Malcolm Henderson.

the presence of only the immediate family of the bride, including her father, William Wilms, and her brother, Herman Paepcke Wilms, and his wife. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Henderson will leave for New York to sail on Saturday on the Majestic for England, where they will visit his parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Kenneth Henderson, in West Horsley, Surrey, and then go to France and Germany.

Upon their return to Chicago, where Mr. Henderson is the British vice consul, he and his bride will be at home at 70 East Walton place. Miss Wilms is following out the old advice to brides to wear "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue," for she says the black broadcloth suit she will wear is old and the tiny black velvet cap with its perky bow is new; she has borrowed a pin from her sister-in-law and her blouse is blue. Her flowers will be white and worn on the shoulder, but she doesn't know yet what her bridegroom has chosen for her bridal bouquet.

A Busy Day at Arts Club.

Any Arts club member who wants to take advantage of all the club has to offer today must spend nearly the entire day there, for this morning at 10:30 o'clock Maurice Sachs will talk on "The Decade of Illusion: Paris, 1918-1928," and this afternoon, from 4 to 6, there is to be a tea for Mme. Maria Jeritza, John Charles Thomas and Mario Duca. Mrs. Charles Barney Goodspeed and Mrs. Potter Palmer will head the receiving line this afternoon.

Young Watson Armour III. is staying "on the job" this winter while his mother and father are enjoying a winter vacation on Florida's west coast. Last winter you will remember Mr. Armour was with Jack Simpson hunting lions and tigers in India.

Mr. and Mrs. Armour have just left Sarasota after a perfectly delightful ten days' visit with the Stanley Fields, and now they're at Useppa island catching tarpon and sailfish. Incidentally, Useppa is Mr. Armour's favorite fishing retreat. On their return home the first week in March Mr. and Mrs. Armour expect to stop for a day or two with the Harold Bryants at their place near Lake Worth. Mrs. Bryant is Mrs. Armour's sister, and Parker Bryant, who has spent a good share of time in Chicago, is now host to Betty Dixon, one of the Homer Dixons' attractive daughters. The Bryants' real home is Coton Manor at Guildsborough, Northampton, England.

Mrs. Cyrus Edson Manierre leaves today and sails Saturday for France to meet her son, Cyrus Edson Manierre Jr., who is in school in Switzerland, and be with him for his month's vacation. Mrs. Manierre will be abroad for two or three months.

Mrs. Owen F. Aldis, who is here for a brief visit from her home in Paris, slipped and broke her ankle while returning to her apartment from a reception that Mr. and Mrs. Graham Aldis gave for her last Monday, and she will spend the next two or three weeks in the Passavant hospital. After that she will go to Florida to visit Mrs. Bryan Lathrop.

Benefit Tonight at Racquet Club.

The Margaret Etter creche is to benefit by a small buffet dinner and dance at the Racquet club tonight. Mrs. Horatio Hackett and Mrs. Louis G. Buss are among those who helped with the arrangements for the party, which will be attended by about forty-five couples.

The letters that Miss Edith Cummings writes home are full of the beauties and warm weather of Jamaica. She and Miss Eleanor Holden sailed on Jan. 26, spent a day in Havana and arrived at Montego bay, Jamaica, the first of February. They are staying at the Casa Blanca hotel. They rented a car and drove over the mountain, which is covered with bright tropical vegetation, and along the cool sea roads. Miss Holden and Miss Cummings like it so much that it will be at least a month before they make any more plans.

Tuesday at midnight a boy weighing seven and one-half pounds was born in St. Luke's hospital and his proud parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. French. He has been named Edward Crossett French and he is the first grandchild of the Edward Clark Crossetts, his mother being the former Ruth Crossett.

Dartmouth Alumni Will Hold Dinner.

Sons of Dartmouth—some 200 or 300 strong—will meet tonight at their annual dinner at the Interfraternity club. Dean Craven Laycock is coming from Hanover to be the guest speaker and representatives of the Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and Cornell clubs in Chicago will occupy places at the speakers' table. Among the veteran alumni of the Hanover school will be Dr. Edwin B. Frost, Charles R. Webster, and Benjamin P. George. Park W. Stickney is president of the Chicago Dartmouth club.

Mrs. Henri David, assisted by Mrs. William A. Nitze, Mrs. Daniel Taylor, and Mlle. Dorcas Perrenoud, will be hostesses at the "causerie" of the Alliance Française this afternoon. Tea will be served at 3:30 and the program will follow at 4. This change will enable M. Henri David to hurry from his classes at the University of Chicago to read "Molière" to the ever-increasing group who meet each Thursday in the library of the Alliance Française at 2 to sew for the Red Cross.

A number of north siders are planning to go to the University of Chicago tomorrow or Saturday evening for a performance of "Camille" at International house. Miss Marian Reed, who played in the Olivet institute benefit "When Chicago Was Young," is taking the lead, and Luther Greene, a young Virginian who came to Chicago this year, is the producer.

Championship Polo Matches to Be Here

Polo will occupy the attention of all lovers of that international game the last two weeks in April, for the 1933 national polo champions will be crowned at the 124th Field Artillery then.

Since their inception in 1922 the national indoor polo championship tournaments have been held in New York and this is the first time one of them has been staged anywhere else. Among the well known Chicagoans who are polo enthusiasts and who are interested in the coming tournament are S. Prentice Porter, Capt. C. C. Smith, Barney Balding, Paul Butler, Col. Charles C. Hafner, Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, and Capt. Maxwell M. Corpening.

The Renaissance society of the Art institute will give a dinner tonight in a private dining room at International house for Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer J. Adler preceding Mr. Adler's lecture on "Art and Esthetics" at the Oriental institute at 8:30 o'clock under the auspices of the society.

The society is sponsoring a most interesting exhibition of pure line drawing—from the Greek to the modern—in room 205 of Wieboldt hall at the university now to which some of the city's best known patrons of art have contributed. The Walter S. Brewsters, Shreve Badger, Miss Alice Roullier, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins are among those who have lent drawings for the exhibition, which is built around a 5th century B. C. Greek vase lent by the Art institute.

Mrs. Charles Sloan, supervisor of the kindergarten at Wesley hospital, one of the philanthropies of the Sunbeam league, is to entertain the league board at luncheon today at the Chicago College club, 196 East Delaware place. Miss Virginia Erlandson is president of the board.

Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine, Mrs. Chauncey Keep, and Mrs. James A. Patten are among those working for the success of the oriental and Spanish dance program to be given by Vera Mirova at 8:30 next Tuesday evening at Kimball hall. The free bed fund at the Pinel sanitarium for mental diseases, a nonsectarian institution, is to benefit by the proceeds.

Gay red and beige cards came in the mail yesterday announcing a students' bazaar Saturday from noon till midnight at International house at the University of Chicago. All of the nationalities represented at the house will have collections of their decorative arts on exhibit.

Chapel Rites

Lovely Suzanne Russell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Arthur Russell of 1320 North State street, wore a Venetian lace dress yesterday for her wedding to Dr. Charles Edward Stepan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Stepan of 3000 Sheridan road.

Her veil of tulle fell from a tiny Dutch bonnet of the same lace and her flowers were lilies of the valley and green orchids, Miss Russell's sister, Virginia, her only attendant, wore gray chiffon with a turban, slippers, and gloves of golden brown. Her bouquet was of lavender orchids. Alfred Stepan served his brother as best man and Dr. George L. Perusse and John Wallace of New York City were the ushers.

The ceremony was read at 5 o'clock by the Very Rev. Joseph P. Morrison in the small chapel of Holy Name cathedral, where weddings are performed only by special privilege. A small reception for the immediate families and a few intimate friends followed the service at the Ambassador East hotel.

The couple left immediately after the reception for a week's honeymoon in the south. Their trip will be shortened by the fact that Dr. Stepan must return to the county hospital, where he is a member of the staff, by March 1. After March 15 the couple will be at home at 401 Fullerton parkway.

low on the shoulder of the darker pink jacket. She was the only woman present with even a reminder of the old-time tiaras and hers was the most delicate, exquisite coronet of pearls.

Year ago dog collars of pearls used to be as much in evidence as tiaras, but they are things of the past, too, although last night Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine had a semblance of one; but it was only a tiny thing compared to the ones we used to see in the diamond horseshoe. Mrs. Valentine was very lovely last night in a lace gown of a soft shade of darkish green.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers always wears some of the handsomest pearls in every assemblage and last night was no exception. She was in white and so were her two women guests, Mrs. Phillip Miller and Mrs. Walter Strong.

One of the most distinctive costumes was worn by slender Mrs. Ralph C. Hamill, a pale blue satin gown and a lei of black and white gardenias. Her charming auburn haired daughter, Margaret, a debutante of last season, wore green crêpe that was most becoming to her. Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, one of the active workers for the annual St. Luke's hospital benefit fashion show, was in gold lamé and Mrs. John W. Gary, another faithful St. Luke's worker [she is president of the woman's board] was in cream lace. Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell, one of Mrs. Childs' head assistants in planning and "putting over" last night's affair, was stunning in wine color velvet and pearls with orchids on one shoulder.

Some of those on the main floor were Mr. and Mrs. Carter H. Harrison, Mrs. Wentworth Field, the Henry Bartholomays, and the Theodore Brentanos, Mrs. Bartholomay in red and Mrs. Brentano in black. Mrs. George Rasmussen, the Walter B. Wolfs, Mrs. Charles F. Spalding, Mrs. Chauncey Keep, Mrs. William W. Gurley, Mrs. Frank J. Loesch, the Donald B. Douglases, the Edward A. Leights, the Orville Taylors, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Wetten, Mr. and Mrs. James Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Veeder, Dr. and Mrs. Otho F. Ball, and Mrs. Harry H. Shearson, who was in wine velvet with a matching wrap and a sable collar.

Student from Evanston Wins Harvard Fellowship

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Henry C. Hatfield of Evanston, Harvard senior, has been awarded one of four Henry fellowships for study abroad, it was announced tonight by the American trustees of the Charles and Julia Henry fund. The stipend is $2,000 a year. Hatfield will go to Oxford university. Hatfield prepared at the Evanston High school and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you can no longer use, please tell me. I can place such things with needy families. Address Sally Joy Brown, The Tribune Office.

Boy Needs Clothes.

"Could you please help me get a blue suit, size 13; a white shirt, size 12½; a pair of shoes, size 4, and a cap, 6¾? I am going to make my first communion and as my father has been out of work for a long time my mother will not be able to get them for me. I am a boy 12 years old.

"L. F."

First communion will be an important event for this boy and if he isn't outfitted in the manner which the occasion calls for he'll be sorely disappointed, I know. Perhaps one of you with boys of the same age could help him.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

[Copyright, 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TRAGEDY AT WHITE PINES.

Jack Morris, manager of the White Pines Country club, and Jim Barnett, secretary, had been working all day making the necessary preparations for the opening of the club after the winter season. The members were giving Morris another chance to dig the place out of the red.

"Well, some one else'll have to make a go of the club now," remarked Barnett to Prof. Fordney as he looked at his associate sitting sideways, his left hand stretched along the edge of the desk almost touching the phone. His body was slumped down into the chair, head bent forward. Blood from the head wound had spattered the papers on his desk.

"If this had happened last summer I wouldn't have been surprised," exclaimed Barnett. "He was so despondent over the financial condition of the club. His heart was set on making a go of it. I got the shock of my life when I found him. I'll resign tomorrow; I'd never enter this office again!"

The bullet, tearing an ugly hole in the left side of Morris' head, had lodged in the brain. Blood from the wound stained his cheek, making a gruesome sight.

"I saw Mrs. Morris drive away just before I discovered him. With the exception of her visit, we've been alone all day and I was out of the office only a few minutes. You'd better tell her what's happened, professor. I'm afraid the shock will be too much for her!"

"Well, my boy—just a minute——" Fordney's eye was caught by several links of a fine gold chain on the floor near the revolver by the dead man's hand hanging over the side of the chair.

"If you're telling the truth," he continued, "Morris' death won't be a surprise to his wife. She probably murdered him!"

WHY DID HE BELIEVE MORRIS HAD BEEN MURDERED?

'State Fair' Is a Wholesome Comedy Drama

Good Old Days Are Back Again at Oriental.

"STATE FAIR."
Produced by Fox.
Directed by Henry King.
Presented at the Oriental theater.

THE CAST.

Margy Frake.....Janet Gaynor
Abel Frake.....Will Rogers
Pat Gilbert.....Lew Ayres
Emily Joyce.....Sally Eilers
Wayne Frake.....Norman Foster
Melissa Frake.....Louise Dresser
The Storekeeper.....Frank Craven
The Barker.....Victor Jory
Harry Ware.....Frank Melton
Blue Boy.....By Himself

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

"Just a short wait at the edge of the sidewalk! Just a short wait . . . etc. . . ."

The good old city of pre-depression days! It used to irk those who had to do the waiting, but was strangely comforting yesterday as it rang out on Randolph street. Here eager patrons buzzed around the doors of the Oriental theater, where "State Fair" had just opened. Washington's birthday—and the grown folks had turned out and brought the children to see a film they knew, from the cast personnel, was sure to be an all-family affair.

For you will agree
That few casts could be besser [German]
Than one boasting of Rogers,
Ayres, Gaynor and Dresser.

"State Fair," adapted from the popular novel by Phil Stong, is wholesome, homely, astute comedy drama. It abounds in clean humor, bunkless performance and interesting incident. The title perfectly indicates the picture's gist, for most of the action occurs on the grounds of a state fair whither have come Mr. and Mrs. Frake, with their son and daughter, to enter for prizes Mrs. Frake's pickles and mincemeat and Mr. Frake's classy boar, "Blue Boy." A pampered hog if ever there was a pampered hog.

"Taste!" commands Ma of Pa. Pa tastes. Shakes his head.

"Pa FRAKE!" says Ma, "I will NOT put intoxicating liquor into my mincemeat . . .!"

If you've never—OR ever—been to a state fair, you'll get a kick from the one on display at the Oriental. It's so down to earth natural; such a far cry from the hullabaloo of city folks' lives. Makes you wistful for simple sights and sounds—and at the same time's a sop to that yearning to get back to nature which occupies a back seat in the minds of most of us. And, as its quaint tapestry unfolds, "State Fair" presents plenty of romance, while it sighs over a heartache or two. The picture of united family life that it presents is charming.

Henry King has done a beautiful job of directing, and all of the players have entered with a will into the spirit of the piece. Perhaps Norman Foster is not ideally cast as a country boy, and mayhap you'll find little Janet Gaynor not quite the naïve and simple child she used to be in looks and actions. But you WILL be crazy about Louise Dresser and Will Rogers, and, I think, mighty well satisfied with the photoplay as a whole.

See you soon!

Tired of toilets that won't scrub clean?

NO END of scrubbing and scouring will remove some stains from the toilet bowl. But Sani-Flush will. Porcelain sparkles. Odors go. And you don't have to slave with a scrubbing brush.

Just sprinkle a little Sani-Flush in the bowl. (Follow directions on the can.) Then flush the toilet. Stains and film disappear. The hidden trap that a brush can't reach is purged and purified. And Sani-Flush won't injure plumbing.

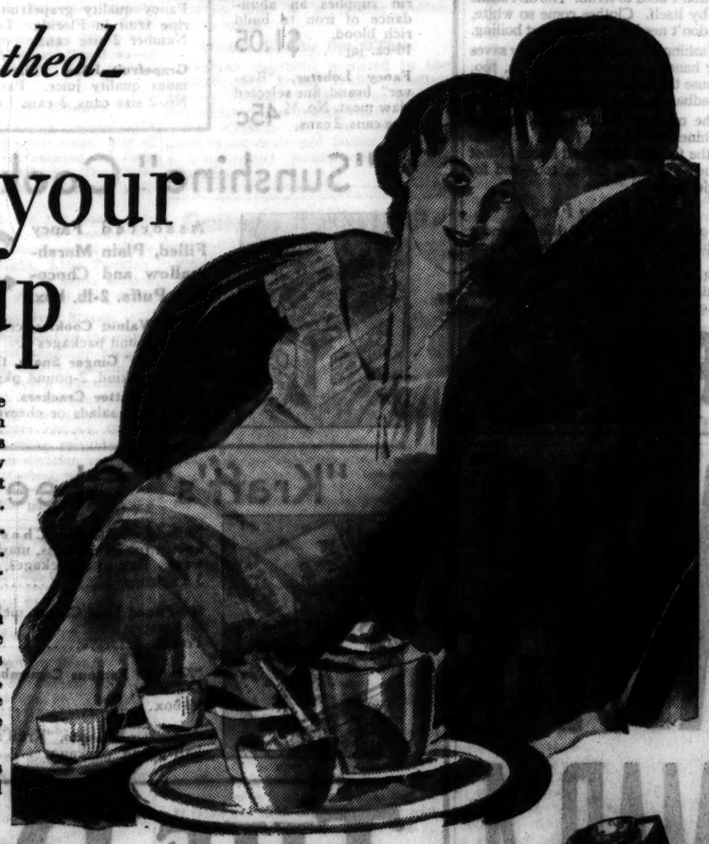
Lifts your Senses up



IT IS part of the ancient wisdom of the Orient that tea stimulates the sluggish senses . . . vitalizes the nerves . . . quickens the emotional response. Thus it adds new color to life, new richness of feeling. It lifts you up—and doesn't let you down.

To get the full benefit of tea, it is important that you drink a tea rich in theol. This fragrant oil is the flavor-bearer—the essence.

Chase & Sanborn's Tender Leaf Tea contains more theol than any but the extravagantly expensive blends. This is because it is composed only of the young, tender leaves, picked during the favorable dry season—when the leaves reach the peak of their flavor and potency.

Your grocer has Chase & Sanborn's Tender Leaf Tea in quarter-pound and half-pound screw-top canisters.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a Saturday morning radio feature—will be presented next Saturday by Mary Meade over station W-G-N. Tune in at 9:45 for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

In these funny times when it's not only smart but easy to be thrifty, folk have quit trying to do all their saving after their groceries have reached the kitchen table—trying to make ends meet by serving lean recipes and offering up cut ration portions.

And why? Because the wise homemaker is discovering that families stay neither happy nor healthy if these economical cookery methods of ours are not backed up by good planning and smart marketing long before it's time for cups and teaspoons to come out.

We have talked, for instance, about the high points in shopping for canned foods, fresh vegetables, and meats. Today let's have a look at those essential health builders, the dairy products.

The wide awake buyer has the problem, first of all, of finding just what milks, butters, and cheeses are available at her dairy or her chosen food stores, and then discovering which are best for her use. For instance, in Chicago, as in other large cities and some small ones, there are milks and milks, with the difference depending on the richness (the amount of butter fat) in a quart, and sometimes in the treatment that has been given the milk before and after bottling or canning.

The first milk fact that turns up is that the average Chicago milk is much better—more creamy, that is—than is that of many other cities. The ordinance requires that bottled milk contain at least 3 per cent butter fat. The milk sold here in Chicago tests from 3.6 to 3.7 per cent butter fat.

Fact number two comes from Paul Potter, TRIBUNE marketing expert, who reports that 9 cent milk is the lowest priced milk Chicago housewives have enjoyed for seventeen years.

Besides the standard grades of fresh milk with which we are familiar, most dairies and many food stores—sometimes at a slightly higher price—can supply us with special milks suited to our needs or our family's tastes. Special drinking milks are to be had that are somewhat richer than average. Certified milk, which is not pasteurized but is produced under almost ideal conditions, has taken a most welcome drop from 25 cents a quart down to a more reachable figure. This milk is also somewhat richer than the usual grade and has retained more of the natural milk flavor.

Buttermilks are something else again, and many dealers offer both the thick culture buttermilk and the old fashioned type. This is the difference: Culture milk is whole milk to which a certain friendly bacteria or culture, as we call it, has been added to somewhat change the texture and flavor of the milk. Many folks find that culture milk agrees with them better than the regular varieties. The old fashioned buttermilk is not whole milk but has come from the churn after butter has been made. It is a quite lean—nonfatty—milk.

Then milk is also on the market in canned form. Evaporated types have simply had 60 per cent of the water removed and the important elements in the milk retained before canning. Condensed milk has also lost more than half of its water and has had sugar added before canning.

Cream may also be bought fresh or canned nowadays. You'll see it graded by most dairies as whipping cream and coffee or table cream.

Butter—let there be cheers!—is low priced and available these days in separately wrapped quarter pound cakes, which does away with the old bugbear of cutting cubes from the whole pound. Or butter by the solid pound or by the several pound roll may be had for the asking.

Lastly, to do dairy products justice we should go into cheeses, but such an army of them are clamoring to be talked about, suffice it to say that cheese, particularly the varieties made here in America, has followed milk, butter, and eggs down the price ladder until it is coming to add flavor and food value to meals many times a week. Shop around a bit. At least grow familiar with the German, Swiss, Dutch, French, Italian, and American types of cheeses, and when a meal needs a bit of zest and sparkle know just which cheese is the proper one to call upon to supply the need.

CORBETT CONQUERS FIELDS; WINS WORLD TITLE

COAST FIGHTER BATTERS JACKIE BEFORE 15,000

Triumph Follows Long Campaign.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 22.—(AP)—Climaxing a three year struggle, Young Corbett of Fresno, Cal., was awarded the welterweight championship of the world here today after he had thudded out a decisive victory over Jackie Fields of Chicago in a ten round bout.

YOUNG CORBETT.

As the shadows began closing in on the Seals' stadium the Fresno southpaw put on a closing round rally that definitely established his superiority over a rival whom he defeated three years ago today in a nontitle bout.

Some 15,000 cheered as the referee, Lieut. Jack Kennedy, U. S. N., lifted Corbett's arm and awarded him the 147 pound crown.

Victor Takes Six Rounds.

Corbett outfought and outpunched his rival in six of the rounds, according to the referee, who called one even and gave three to the champion.

Corbett's battle plan included a killing pace from the start. He shot long lefts to the chin that had Fields missing as early as the opening round.

Outguessing Fields as the latter bored in, the new champion jumped back after every drive to counter with lefts to the body that jolted the fight out of his opponent.

For the fourth time in the history of boxing the name Corbett proved the downfall of a champion. The Fresno Italian followed a long line of illustrious predecessors that started when James J. Corbett punched the heavyweight crown from the head of John L. Sullivan.

Green Second on List.

George Green of San Francisco, original Young Corbett followed soon after to defeat Mysterious Billy Smith, welterweight titleholder, and Young Corbett II. [William Rothwell] knocked out Terry McGovern to claim the featherweight crown.

Corbett went along at a swift pace for the first half of the battle and this margin stood him in good stead in the closing rounds, when Fields put on spurts that caused his backers to anticipate victory.

After losing the first five rounds, Fields came to life to win the sixth. In this round he pummeled Corbett at will, the latter tiring under punishment.

Corbett gained a decided edge in the seventh round. Near its close he connected four times with lefts to Fields' jaw.

Jackie Makes Final Bid.

Fields made his greatest bid in the ninth round when he battered Corbett around the ring. The challenger made but little show of a defense and contented himself with attempting to tie up Fields in the clinches.

With a chance to retain his crown by a knockout, Fields rushed out in the tenth and for most of the three minutes held the advantage. His punching was considerably weaker than at the start, however, and at no time was Corbett in danger.

While figures of the gate receipts were not available immediately after the bout, Ancil Hoffman, associated with the promotion of the contest, estimated they would run around $50,000.

CUBS SEE NO REST FOR THE WEARY; MUST TOIL TODAY

Grimm Orders First Drill for Island Arrival.

Flagstaff, Ariz., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—There is no rest for the weary. Manager Charlie Grimm caused the lifting of many eyebrows on the Cubs' special train when he announced this evening the would be exercises tomorrow afternoon at Wrigley field, Catalina island.

"I know we are not due at the island until noon," he said, "but the boys can appear in uniform at 1:30 and at least throw the ball about."

What! No Lunch?

This may necessitate the elimination of lunch, and missing a meal is a major calamity in the mind of the average major league ball player. The order for immediate toil indicates that Grimm will demand diligence on this, his first training trip as a manager.

Those who fear the national pastime is in the doldrums because of the depression should be encouraged by the reception given the National league champions along the way. Every place the train stopped the athletes were greeted by crowds that jammed th station platforms. A lot of actual Indians assembled at Gallup, N. M., and rode pinto ponies around the train. The curiosity was entirely negligible and one suspects they are part of the act, as blanket and pottery peddlers followed in their wake, doing no business whatever. Salaries start with the season and the ball players, like the bear, are living on their own fat.

The Cubs are due in Los Angeles at 7:30 tomorrow morning. Their journey was a pleasant progress through the arid lands until Grimm gave down the work tomorrow order.

SOX LEAVE TONIGHT

Eight active members of the White Sox, accompanied by President and Mrs. J. Louis Comiskey, Trainer William Buckner, and Joe T. Barry, traveling secretary, will leave the Northwestern station at 9:35 tonight on the first leg of the trip to the club's new spring training quarters at Pasadena, Cal.

The players in the party will be Pitchers Urban Faber, Milton Gaston, Sam Jones, and Joseph Heving; Second Baseman Minter [Jack] Hayes, Catcher Fred Bergman, and Outfielder Evar Swanson. Others in the group will be Miss Dorothy Comiskey and Mrs. Leslie Rosenblum.

Other units of the south side cast will be picked up en route to Pasadena, where the lot will be welcomed to camp by Manager Lew Fonseca. Jimmy Dykes and Mule Haas, who were purchased from the Philadelphia Athletics along with Al Simmons early in the winter, and who made the western trip by boat through the Panama canal, also will be members of the welcoming committee.

A note of disquietude entered the preparations for the getaway yesterday with the announcement that Simmons will be two weeks late in joining his mates on the coast.

Simmons, who has been taking the baths at Hot Springs, Ark., for several weeks, will have to submit to the extraction of five teeth. Al complained of lameness in the right thumb this winter and was ordered by the Sox bosses to undergo a thorough physical examination. The examination, with attendant X-ray photographs, revealed that the entire trouble lies in infected teeth.

Princeton Whips Yale, 46-26; Stays in Title Race

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Princeton's basketball team defeated Yale, 46 to 26, to remain in the running for the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball league championship. Yale, however, still has a chance to tie for the crown even if Princeton wins all the games remaining on its schedule.

South Side Golden Gloves Tournament Opens; 32 Champions Crowned in North Side Finals

White City Program to Continue with 100 Fights Tonight.

The greatest number of boys ever to compete in a boxing tournament in one night fought in the Golden Gloves tournament in Chicago last night. At Loyola university 85 boys took part in 54 bouts, while 198 fought in 107 bouts at White City.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The south section, largest in six years of Golden Gloves history, last night began its qualifying trials, which lead to the Tournament of Champions. Three thousand fans attended the opening and their cheers, reverberating from the rafters of the White City roller skating rink, where two rings were pitched, encouraged 198 amateurs who battled for the right to stay in the eliminations.

From a field of 812 registered boys, more than 400 reported yesterday afternoon for physical examinations and to be weighed. Of these, 352 satisfied the physicians they were ready to fight. Because of the extremely large entry in the novice featherweight, lightweight, welterweight, and middleweight classes these boys were sent into the rings first.

100 Bouts Tonight.

One hundred and seven bouts were held before the clerks called a halt. This leaves at least 100 bouts tonight, with approximately 80 tomorrow night when the qualifiers from Chicago's south side will be named. All other novice classes will step into tournament action tonight and several of the weights in the open classes. All weights will be represented tomorrow night.

The south side knows its fighters. Moreover, the south siders never have hesitated to let their boxers know whether they were good or bad. Last night was no exception. Bedlam greeted those who fought with courage and spirit.

They're Too Eager.

It was necessary for the referees and corner men to exercise extreme caution to protect some of the boxers from their own enthusiasm. In the main, all were in condition, but many of the novices, engaging in their first bouts, showed no knowledge of boxing. These lads were sent from the rings when it became apparent they were overmatched.

The admission price for tonight's bouts will remain the same, 60 cents. Doors will be open at 6 o'clock, one hour before the first bout begins.

Officials Do Expert Work.

Marshaling the army of Golden Gloves boxers last night required expert services of the officials, more particularly, since others of the corps

Haberski Beats Marcy in Feature Bout at Loyola.

BY ARCH WARD.

Chicago's north side will send a team to the Golden Gloves Tournament of Champions at the Stadium Monday that looks superior to those of the west side and the far south section, the two qualifying rounds previously completed.

Sixteen boys, two in each of the eight weight divisions, last night won their way to the big three day carnival at the Stadium before the third successive capacity crowd of Loyola gymnasium. Sixteen novices, young men getting their baptism in major competition, also qualified for the Stadium show. The novice meet will be run in conjunction with the Tournament of Champions, which brings together the survivors of the four Chicago sectionals and the winners from 23 out of town centers, ranging from Nashville to Green Bay and from Cleveland to the Mississippi river.

Celebron Star of Team.

The standout fighter of the north side team is Bill Celebron, who last year was a runner up in the welter weight Golden Gloves ranks. He disposed of two strong opponents, George Taylor of the Waukegan A. A., and M. J. Morris, unattached. He stopped Taylor in the second round. It was the first time Taylor had failed to finish a match in five years of amateur boxing.

Other north side qualifiers who are old Golden Glove favorites include Leonard Cohen, flyweight, and Lynn Thompson, bantamweight. Cohen was a member of the international squad last summer, but did not fight against Germany.

Trafton's Leads Winners.

Trafton's gymnasium landed the most places in the open class. Six of the 16 qualifiers represented the Randolph street gymnasium. The Catholic Youth organization won two positions.

The attendance for the north side meet established a new record for Chicago sectional tournaments. There were 2,300 last night, 2,100 Tuesday and 3,100 Monday. The same section last winter turned out less than 4,000.

Haberski Wins Over Marcy.

The most thrilling bout of the north side trials brought together George Haberski and Bud Marcy, teammates from the Catholic Youth organization. Haberski was a C. Y. O. champion a year ago and Marcy was an alternate on the 1932 intercity Golden Gloves squad. The only other candidate in the 126 pound open division was William Steimer, unattached, but the luck

ROSS PILES UP WIDE MARGIN TO DEFEAT GROGAN

Gives Away 7 Pounds and Floors Foe 3 Times.

Barney Ross' first invasion of the welterweight ranks was a success last night. The Chicago lightweight, who rose from a Golden Gloves champion to become one of the leading contenders for the lightweight championship of the world, belted around Tommy Grogan, veteran Omaha, Neb., welterweight, to win an easy ten round decision at the Washington boulevard arena.

Ross won every round. He floored the Nebraskan three times, but lacked the punch to put him away for the full count. Grogan took nine counts each time he hit the canvas.

Tommy Down in Second.

After landing with several damaging blows in the second round, Ross sent a stiff right to Grogan's jaw, putting him down. Grogan rose when the count reached nine. In the fifth, Grogan went down for his second nine count and a few seconds after the seventh started he dropped again.

Grogan weighed 142, Ross 135. Frank Harmon, who promoted the show, announced the attendance as 2,500, with the net receipts, $2,700.

Haines also is a former Golden Gloves boxer.

Walker Knocks Out O'Shea.

Another knockout occurred in the preliminaries, Young Walker sending Mickey O'Shea to the canvas for the full count in the fourth round.

Don Messina and Lou Vine fought a six round draw and Davey Day won a four round decision over Buddy Kearns.

TRINER REVEALS ILLINOIS IS OUT OF N. B. A. FOLD

Illinois is no longer a member of the National Boxing association, and has not been for more than two months. This was revealed yesterday by Joseph Triner, newly inducted chairman of the state commission, who stated that Illinois resigned from the organization on Dec. 13 in a letter from Gen. John Clinnin, at that time chairman of the Illinois group.

The action became known for the first time yesterday with the publication of a report that Illinois would quit the N. B. A. unless Jack Dempsey, who has been endeavoring to make Chicago the site of the heavyweight bout between Max Schmeling of Germany and Max Baer of California, were reinstated in the N. B. A.

Gen. Clinnin's letter to James Brown of Ypsilanti, Mich., president of the N. B. A., in resigning, however, stated that the move was made so that the incoming Illinois commission would be given a free rein in the matter of affiliations. The victory of Freddie Miller over Tommy Paul at the Chicago Stadium on Jan. 13, by which time Illinois had resigned, for the N. B. A. official featherweight championship, was not explained.

Triner refused to say anything more than that Illinois was no longer a member of the organization. Whether or not the Dempsey angle is the cause of the state's withdrawal remains to seen.

BRITON DRIVES WITH ONE HAND TO WORLD MARK

Bumps Slow Flight of Bluebird.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Automobile speed records set by Sir Malcolm Campbell since 1925 follow:

	Miles per hour
1925—Pendine Sands, England	150
1928—Daytona Beach	206
1929—South Africa	212
1931—Daytona Beach	245
1932—Daytona Beach	253.968
1933—Daytona Beach	272.108

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—"Just to please the crowd" on hand to watch him in a practice spin, Sir Malcolm Campbell drove out and set a world automobile speed record with his new Bluebird racing car here today.

SIR MALCOLM CAMPBELL.

Driving with only one hand—the other being out of commission from a sprain—the daring Briton put his machine over the sands of the beach speedway at an average two way speed of 272.108 miles an hour. This was 18.140 miles faster than he traveled when he set the old record of 253.968 here a year ago.

Reaches 330 M. P. H.

On his first run down the course today Sir Malcolm was clocked at 273.556 miles an hour. He said afterward that his wheels were spinning at the unbelievable rate of 330 miles an hour at times. On the second run his average was 270.676.

To add to the brilliance of today's achievement, the beach course was in very poor condition. In fact it was so rough, Sir Malcolm said afterward that "on several occasions I thought I was gone."

"If I had not been able to control the car so magnificently I should have landed either in the sand dunes or in the ocean," he told reporters.

"All Over the Course."

"The visibility was very, very bad. First I was heading for the sand dunes and the next instant I was heading for the sea. The car was shaking all over the course."

Sir Malcolm said so uneven was the course that he found his car "bumping along like a pea in a pot."

"I did not put my foot down hard on the accelerator until I had almost reached the measured mile," he explained, "because the car would not have stayed under control at a high speed with the beach as bumpy as it was."

His Roughest Ride.

"It was the roughest ride I ever had and I'll multiply that fifty times. It is not an easy matter to frighten me, but honestly, if the car had not controlled so magnificently and had I not had confidence in it I don't know what I would have done. It answered to the controls marvelously, otherwise I should have lost complete control of it and that would have been bad."

At that, the racer characterized his record breaking run as "merely a high speed test" run and said he was "sure the old car could have done much better if I had had better conditions."

"I did not have the throttle on full at any time because the car simply would not have stayed under control at the higher speed," he declared.

May Let Mark Stand.

Whether or not Sir Malcolm will try for a still greater record before returning to England is not known. In fact he intimated very strongly today that he was satisfied with his new mark despite the adverse conditions under which it was set and that he might be content to let it stand for the time being.

On his first trial today Sir Malcolm was clocked over the measured mile in 13.16 seconds. He covered the same mile on his second run in 13.30 seconds, making the average 13.23.

Over the one kilometer route—approximately five-eighths of a mile—the racer set a new record of 271.436 miles an hour. On his record run last year he covered this part of the course at the rate of 251.340.

Just a Blue Streak.

The crowds gathered along the 12 mile course had difficulty in following the blue streak as it shot by.

"On both of my runs," Campbell said, "there were times when I could see no distance whatever ahead. I just had to guess and trust to luck. I was bothered by sand being kicked up into my face, too, and from strong fumes from the motor."

The tires of the machine were badly cut by sea shells along the course.

DERBY NOMINATIONS.

NOMINATIONS to the Kentucky Derby, to be run May 6, closed with 118 colts, fillies and geldings listed, three more than last year. Nominating, the technical word, is to all intents and purposes equivalent to the popular expression of entering a candidate for this great 3 year old event.

Nomination means that owners paying a fee of $25 have made their 3 year old eligible as a possible starter, but not necessarily a probable starter, and distinctly not an actual starter. This eligibility, by payment of this first and only advance fee, endures until 45 minutes before post time on Derby afternoon.

That is why so many nominations are made. Every owner who has even an outside chance of his colt developing or improving will post this $25 against the chance of winning first money of about $50,000, second money of $6,000, third money of $3,000 and fourth money of $1,000.

Many nominators, no doubt, feel their entries have small chance of going to the post. Every now and then, however, some colt or filly develops unexpectedly and the stable finds to its dismay that the colt or filly had not been named for some stake which it has more than a fair chance to win. Such occurrences, however, are more common among future events for 2 year olds than for 3 year olds. However, this $25 chance is well worth taking nearly three months before the race is run.

In Derby money value, nominations are not nearly as important as actual starters. The starting fee is $500 additional. Thus it takes 20 extra nominations to equal one more starter. All nominating and starting fees go to the winner along with $40,000 of the $50,0000 added by the Churchill Downs management.

Thus the largest Derby stake was in Reigh Count's year of 1928 when 22 went to the post, and Reigh Count earned $55,375 for the Louis Farm stables, owned by Mrs. John D. Hertz. The next highest winning was the following year with 21 starters when Clyde Van Dusen earned $53,950 for Owner H. P. Gardner.

To the Lame Ducks.

When Lame Ducks go home to roost,
Embittered by the trend,
Why not try to help or boost—
Be sure that won't offend.

Some of you should still have jobs
While others do not rate,
But don't go back with moans and sobs
From autumn's adverse fate.

So when you start that homeward trek
And you're feeling somewhat sad,
If tears are streaming down your neck
Just think of the fun you've had.

And on that day when you haste away
Elsewhere to seek employ,
Just take your hoe and dig and sow—
You still can be a farmer boy.

Joseph Hughes.

DRY KENNEL WILL CURB HOOKWORM MENACE TO DOGS

Owners Urged to Put In Floors of Brick.

BY BOB BECKER.

Distemper stands at the head of the list of dog diseases which annually take a heavy toll of canines in this country. But recently dog fanciers have been obliged to recognize the menace of hookworm infestation as one of the sources of great economic loss in the breeding of dogs.

A few months ago we were inclined to scoff when a springer spaniel owned by a sportsman on the north shore was reported by a veterinary to be infested with hookworms. Since then investigation has shown that these parasites [there are three species found in dogs] are much more common than generally is known. Every dog owner should know something about them and be able to recognize the symptoms of infestation.

Victim Gets Thin, Tires.

A dog with hookworm usually gets very thin, displays an extremely variable appetite, tires easily and shows other external evidences of trouble. In the case of the springer spaniel, which we had a chance to observe at intervals over a period of months, the dog was able to hunt, but it was thin in spite of a tremendous appetite which included any food item which it could get from a stolen salad to meat. In severe cases the dog may show every sign of anemia for the reason that the hookworms draw upon the blood supply of their host by clinging to the intestines.

Hookworm is curable if the dog is treated in time. A drug which removes the parasites should be used. Then the animal regains its strength naturally. Usually a diet of two-thirds raw meat and one-third fresh vegetable will work wonders with a dog which has been freed of the hookworm parasites.

Build Kennel Floor of Brick.

There is one extremely valuable lesson to be learned by dog owners when all phases of hookworm infestation are considered. This has to do with kennels and prevention. It is known that hookworms thrive on and in moist ground. The larvæ are tenacious of life, capable of passing up and down through the soil and can withstand snow and freezing temperatures. An infective larva can bore through the skin of a dog to develop in its host.

Therefore, the lesson is: build concrete or brick and asphalt floors in your kennels. By doing this you automatically prevent hookworms from developing in your kennel yard. Moreover, hard surfaced floors of this type are easy to flush and disinfect. At the same time they are impervious to the digging tactics of the hookworm larvæ.

Holmes Back to Play with Hawk Sextet

Louis Holmes, center, who was recalled by the Blackhawks from the Tulsa Oilers of the American league, arrived in town yesterday. Holmes reported in excellent condition and stated to Maj. McLaughlin that the experience he gained with the Tulsa aggregation while they were making their recent spurt of 11 victories in 14 games, to lead the league, would be a big help to himself and the Hawks in the remaining games of the present season, which are expected to move them into a position to battle for the Stanley cup next month.

The Blackhawks left New York Wednesday night for Montreal, where they battle the Canadiens tonight. Despite the Frenchmen's lowly standing in their division and the terrible 10 to 0 beating received from the Boston Bruins Tuesday night, they are only a game and a half from third place. Back home on their own ice, they can be counted on to give the Blackhawks a battle all the way.

There will be games on three other rings tonight. The Toronto Maple Leafs will play the Senators at Ottawa, Montreal Maroons will cross sticks in New York with the Americans, while the New York Rangers tackle the Red Wings at Detroit in a battle for the American division leadership.

GRIFFITH ENDS WORKOUTS FOR VON PORAT BOUT

Tuffy Griffith, west side heavyweight, finished boxing yesterday for his 10 round bout with Otto von Porat of Oslo, Norway, at the Coliseum tomorrow night. He boxed four rounds with Paul Pantaleo. Von Porat finished sparring drills Tuesday. Both boxers will do only loosening up exercises today.

Izzy Gastanaga, New York heavyweight, will make his Chicago debut in another 10 rounder against Babe Hunt of Ponca City, Okla. Gastanaga has been handicapped by injuries since he knocked out Charley Retzlaff at New York last year. The opening 10 round contest will bring together Joe Sekyra, Dayton, O., heavyweight, and Jack Roper of Chicago.

Ray Tramblie, Rockford, Ill., middleweight, will receive a test against Marty Sampson of New York in a six rounder. Trablie knocked out Young Stuhley in a round last week at the Cicero stadium. Jack Moran and Freddy Langford, middleweights, will clash in a four round contest.

Honor Roger Kiley at Basketball Game Tonight

Roger J. Kiley will be honored tonight when the Conboy Athletic club basketball team meets the Kiley Boosters at the Community Recreation center, 4711 Madison street. Bernie Leahy, Joe Sheeketski, former Notre Dame football players, and Garland Grange will appear in the Kiley lineup.

Golden Gloves Battles Begin on South Side

were at Loyola university to conduct the finals of the north side tournament. The four rings were placed in operation without a slip.

Tomorrow night the south section tournament ends with the finals of the qualifying fights in both Novice and Open classes. This will complete Chicago's team of 64 boys, who will participate in the Tournament of Champions at the Stadium on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. They will compete against the champion teams of twenty-three cities in seven states and against the champions of the Catholic Youth Organization of Chicago.

Caserio Fights Tonight.

Fred Caserio, 1931 Golden Gloves team captain and middleweight champion, who did not compete last year, will fight tonight. Caserio will compete against 13 middleweights for one of the two qualifying positions from the south section in the Tournament of Champions. Last year Caserio won the National A. A. U. title at New York and then, although defeated by Carmen Barth of Cleveland in the finals of the American Olympic trials, was placed on the United States team. Fred had beaten Barth in the finals of the National A. A. U.

Old time amateur champions still love the game. Willie Buff, who won the 1924 Olympic lightweight championship, entered Don Tanner, his protégé, in the 147 pound novice class last night. Don stopped Malachy Regan in one round and will continue tonight against better opposition.

Watson to Try Again.

Johnny Phagan, Chicago Golden Gloves welterweight champion last year, winner against New York and in the international bouts with Germany, was among the spectators. He was wishing for another crack at New York despite his recent auspicious start in professional boxing.

Earl Watson, entered in the welterweight class in the open division yesterday, will fight tonight. Twice Earl came within one place of winning a golden glove. In 1928 Benny Goldblatt beat Watson for the featherweight championship and two years later Chauncey Crain won the lightweight title.

TAX FREE LAND IS BIG PROBLEM FOR MONTREAL

Many Exemptions; Deficit Faced.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Canada, Feb. 22.—Faced with the problem of balancing an expected $9,000,000 deficit in the amount necessary to run the government during 1933 as a result of tax delinquency, city officials of Montreal, Canada, are having the subject of tax exempt property thrust upon them.

Practically one-fourth of all Montreal property is tax exempt, and the question is now being raised as to whether the city will have to abandon its time honored custom of exempting from the property tax its thousands of churches, convents, schools and other religious and educational establishments in order to avoid financial chaos.

In the past, the subject has not been considered actively by civic officials, but with revenues fallen to a place where operating expenses cannot be met, the granting of exemption has become a vital issue. No one wants to shoulder the responsibility for limiting exemption, but popular opinion is gradually swinging in this direction.

Much Tax Exempt Property.

Montreal property on the books has a total valuation of $1,308,424,558. Of this $313,668,539 is exempt, leaving $994,756,019 taxable. About half of the exempt property belongs to the various governments. Ownership of exempt property is divided as follows:

Federal government	$ 13,766,700
Provincial government	12,141,760
Corp. of Montreal	102,909,450
Mont. Harbor Com.	38,120,220
Roman Cath. churches	20,681,320
Protestant churches	8,557,380
Roman Cath. schools	41,569,830
Protestant schools	23,727,832
Cath. charities	21,290,374
Prot. charities	11,305,150
Cath. communities	1,470,200
Prot. institutions	238,100
Cath. presbyteries	1,334,900
Prot. presbyteries	906,500
Jewish prop.	1,335,580
Special	7,851,677
Streets not ceded to city	1,197,866
Miscellaneous	6,286,500
Other churches	67,500
Total	$313,668,539

Despite Montreal's low civic tax rate on property, which is $1.35 per $100 of value, 40 per cent of the 1932 taxes remain unpaid. Montreal has need of more than $13,000,000 to pay city wages of $6,680,000 and administration expenses of $6,500,000. It can find only $4,100,000 to meet these obligations. Of the total revenues, fixed charges and school funds absorb one-fourth the total revenues of the city. Further, the city is having to pay out $1,000,000 a month for direct cash relief for 85,000 families. And non-payment of taxes during 1933 bids fair to exceed the 1932 amount.

May Limit Tax Exemption.

This is the picture which is impelling officials to study tax exemption. One Montreal alderman has signified his intention of asking the city council to abolish exemption on certain semi-educational or social establishments, including fraternal quarters, juvenile and cadet training establishments and organized social bodies, such as the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A., etc., all of which now enjoy property tax favors.

The rule that governs Montreal on exempt property applies to the whole province of Quebec. The province also recorded a deficit for the year, and it is not beyond possibility that the question of cutting exemptions to a much lower figure will have to be faced by provincial officials in the near future.

Exempt property does not have to pay the $1.35 rate per $100 of value, but it is charged for special or improvement taxes and also for water taxes. Vacant property in the hands of the city for non-payment of taxes amounts to less than $1,000,000 of assessed value.

ADS BEAT SLUMP OF 1920, ASSERTS H. S. FIRESTONE

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Harvey S. Firestone, talking in Miami, says the nation has to get back to "fundamentals." Addressing the Committee of One Hundred, he tells how he licked the panic of 1920 and paid off a 45 million dollar debt by advertising heavily in newspapers and adjusting the output of his plants.

H. S. FIRESTONE.

"I told my sales manager to go on a vacation," he said. "Then I placed full page newspaper advertisements in every city in the United States. Within two months I sold 18,000,000 tires and reduced my indebtedness to $22,000,000. Next I cut my expense and readjusted business. In less than four years I did not owe the banks anything."

"We must change our attitude and concentrate on simple fundamentals to improve business. Let's make a sacrifice and help the other fellow."

Clearing House Offers Tribute to George Reynolds.

As a token of their esteem for George M. Reynolds the members of the clearing house committee of the Chicago Clearing House association are presenting him with an embossed and framed copy of a resolution in Mr. Reynolds' honor voted by the committee on the occasion of his retirement after a decade of service as chairman of this group.

Signers will be the chief executives of the big loop banks, who comprise the committee. The resolution expresses the good wishes of the members and their gratitude for ten years of skillful and courageous leadership by the retiring chairman.

New Products to Release Public's Pent Up Buying Power.

Frank Chase, widely known Chicago engineer-architect, comes back from a visit to the east convinced that the pentup demand for necessities plus the early introduction of some important new products will do much to stimulate business recovery.

"The world in general," he says, "has yet to learn about some of the wonderful advances made by engineers and scientists during the last two or three years, which have been held back while manufacturers have awaited a propitious moment to bring them forward.

"In Philadelphia I saw whole automobile frames made of alloy steel, three times as strong as the ordinary frame and yet so light I could lean over and lift one with my own hands. They're making motor trucks a thousand pounds lighter by using such frames, and thereby adding greatly to the potential pay load.

"They now have structural steel coming in rolls. Instead of riveting it they speed it through a spot welding process that has the appearance of a sewing machine."

Mr. Chase, who is a former railroad architect, sees in the new light construction railway cars the seeds of a new era of railway prosperity.

"No longer," he says, "is it necessary to haul around ten tons of iron and machinery to transport each 150 to 200 pounds of passenger. The new steel alloy rubber tired motor coach is the answer to the challenge of the motor truck."

War in Far East Brings Buying in Silver Market.

Silver now is the commodity stirring the imaginations of speculators. With the Japanese invading Jehol the Chinese will be needing more silver, their main form of money, according to the reasoning of speculators in London and New York.

This, together with the proposals for boosting the price of silver by act of congress, has brought silver up to 27 cents an ounce from the historic low of 24¼ cents on Dec. 29.

Last month shipments from San Francisco to China amounted to 3,701,000 fine ounces, the highest since October, 1930, and in contrast to only 212,000 fine ounces in December.

OIL PRODUCERS OF WORLD SEEK AN AGREEMENT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 22. — Another attempt to revive the world petroleum cartel has been initiated in London at a secret conference of representatives of all the greatest producers except Russia.

The present conference is the fourth which has been held in recent months. The soviets wrecked the first conference by refusing to subscribe to schemes designed to limit production and to raise prices. They are not present now because their output has fallen to a point where soviet foreign commitments must be met by supplies purchased from the United States.

Chicago Power Output Above U. S. Average

The output of electricity in the Chicago district for the week ending Feb. 18 fell off a little as compared with the corresponding period last year, but it was slightly better than the average for the United States, according to the weekly report by the Commonwealth Edison company.

Chicago's output for the week was 95,456,000 kilowatt hours compared with 100,042,000 kilowatt hours last year—a decrease of 4.6 per cent. The average decrease for the whole country for the same period as compared with the like week in 1932 was 4.9 per cent.

Commenting on its report the Commonwealth Edison company says:

"The percentages for this week and for the month are significantly better than during December and January and this is not entirely the result of the cold weather as the Commonwealth Edison company's light and power, exclusive of railway, also shows a good improvement."

The total output for the whole country was 1,469,732,000 kilowatt hours according to the "liquidating committee" the National Electric Light association, the organization which is being succeeded by the recently formed Edison Electric institute. This compared with an output of 1,482,509,000 kilowatt hours in the week of Feb. 11 and 1,545,459,000 kilowatt hours for the week of Feb. 20, 1932.

GERMAN BEER BANKERS SEE CHANCE IN U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 22.—Proof that foreign brewing interests are awake to the possibilities of a new market in a reversal of the prohibition laws was found today in the announcement that Oscar Thieben, managing director of the Bank für Brau-Industrie [Bank for Brewing Industry] of Berlin and Dresden, would arrive here tomorrow for a study of the market that may be created by ratification of the repeal resolution adopted by the senate yesterday.

The Bank für Brau-Industrie, through its stockholders, controls many of the largest and best known breweries at such famous seats of German beer manufacture as Berlin, Kulmbach, Dortmund, Radeberg, Augsburg, Aschaffenburg and Frankfurt.

DETROIT BANK HEADS DISCUSS OPENING PLANS

Withdrawals Less than Allowed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—[Special.]—Washington's birthday was far from being a holiday for officials of bank and trust companies in Michigan, especially those in Detroit. Here the program was just one conference after another.

These meetings were held in an effort to determine conditions under which the institutions will reopen tomorrow morning, special points at issue being the conditions in Gov. Comstock's second proclamation.

Gov. Comstock declared a vacation of his own and spent Tuesday night in a camp 200 miles north of Lansing. Today, at Alpena, Mich., he said he is confident the bank situation will soon clarify and that his second proclamation will stand without amendment. His chief purpose, he said, is to protect the depositors and general business.

Plan to Restore Confidence.

Bank Commissioner Reichert declared that the establishment of the "Michigan plan," if beginning tomorrow morning, should restore complete confidence in the state's banks, and that, with the return of confidence, millions of dollars' worth of deposits that during the last year had been placed in deposit vaults and other hide-outs should be returned. The amount of money now being hoarded in Michigan is estimated at approximately $200,000,000.

"As far as the banks are concerned, the responsibility is on them as to whether they comply with the proclamation and not continue the holiday," the governor announced. "I have no idea of putting the state in the banking business and my attitude shall continue solely in the public interest."

The state bank commissioner and temporary dictator of the state's banks today explained the gist of the "Michigan plan" of bank operation, if the banks and trust companies reopen for business Thursday morning. Briefly stated, the commission explained that the state is empowered to step into a bank that is slipping into a dangerous condition and be able to save it by limiting deposit withdrawals, sequestering slow assets, and establishing trust deposits. All previous programs, he said, have required the state to hold off until the bank worked itself into such a condition that liquidation or the closing of the doors for reorganization was necessary.

Hold Accepted Checks.

Detroit merchants have made no attempt to have accepted checks rewritten or taken up, and will not do so until the Detroit Clearing House association "clarifies its position."

A fraction of more than 40 per cent of the money set aside by Detroit banking institutions under the 5 per cent withdrawal rule had been withdrawn at the close of business Tuesday afternoon. The official figures follow:

Total deposits at time of last bank call, on Dec. 31, 1932, were $667,106,175; amount available under the 5 per cent rule, $27,912,750; amount withdrawn to date under the 5 per cent rule, $11,295,298.

Drug, Inc., Puts '32 Income at $3.84 a Share

A net profit for 1932 of $13,467,092 was reported yesterday by Drug, Inc., large holding company controlling manufacturers of drug products and chain drug store systems. This compared with a net profit of $19,440,456 for 1931. The per share earnings for 1932 were $3.84, compared with $5.55 in 1931. The report was signed by A. H. Diebold, president.

The consolidatel balance sheet shows current assets of $57,434,894 as of Dec. 31, 1932, including $16,129,745 in cash and $10,978,749 in marketable securities at quoted values. Current liabilities total $8,964,548.

Plan Capital Stock Reduction.

It was announced in the report that a proposal to reduce the capital from $85,468,228 to $35,014,990 will be submitted to the stockholders' meeting on March 14. It is proposed to change the company's shares from no par value to $10 and to utilize $23,062,579 of the resultant capital surplus to adjust book values of certain subsidiary property accounts.

The report contains a pro forma balance sheet giving effect to the proposed capital changes. This shows a decrease in fixed assets from $37,379,488 to $21,876,704; a reduction in trade marks, good will, patents, etc., from $45,232,443 to $42,253,959, and creation of a capital surplus of $26,790,658 after the readjustment of property accounts.

May Sell English Subsidiary.

Mr. Diebold stated that the proposed sale of a substantial part of the corporation's subsidiary, Boots Pure Drug Co., Ltd., of Great Britain, had been arranged, but the deal was not approved by the British treasury on account of the foreign exchange situation. Earnings for the British subsidiary totaled $1,841,219, with sterling exchange computed at $3.33.

BRITAIN REDUCES ITS UNFAVORABLE TRADE BALANCE

LONDON, Feb. 22.—(AP)—Trade statistics disclosed today that the United Kingdom imported more from the dominions during 1932 than ever before and that its exports to empire countries also increased in the same period.

Regarding the data, Leslie Hore-Belisha, financial secretary to the treasury, declared in a speech that "we are not only recovering but are shaping Britain anew."

The statistics showed that the British debt balance fell from £104,000,000 in 1931 to £59,000,000 in 1932. Mr. Hore-Belisha described the trend as "one of the most miraculous rehabilitations ever recorded in history."

"If we had the same invisible receipts as we had in 1931 we should actually be £15,000,000 on the right side," he said. "We imported less food and more raw materials and exported more manufactured goods in 1932 than in 1931."

Referring to the wheat subsidy, Hore-Belisha said the result had been that in 1932 England had planted 1,344,000 acres of wheat compared with 1,250,000 in 1931. There were indications, too, there would be a further increase of 17 per cent in the current year, he maintained.

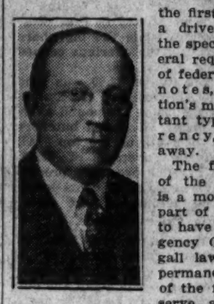
RESERVE SEEKS TO EASE RULES ON CURRENCY

Specific Collateral Method Attacked.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—The Federal Reserve board has launched the first phase of a drive to have the specific collateral requirements of federal reserve notes, the nation's most important type of currency, swept away.



EUGENE MEYER JR. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

The first phase of the campaign is a move on the part of the board to have the emergency Glass-Steagall law made a permanent part of the federal reserve act. This was revealed today when a letter written by Gov. Eugene Meyer Jr. of the board to Representative Steagall, chairman of the house banking and currency committee, was made public.

Requires 40 Per cent Gold.

Permanent adoption of the Glass-Steagall law would permit the reserve banks at any time the reserve board wished to substitute government securities for the gold collateral behind the reserve notes. The only limitation on the substitution would be the original requirement of the federal reserve act that at least 40 per cent of the collateral behind the currency be gold.

Wiping out the note collateral requirements has been thought of by experts of the board as a measure which would free the reserve banks' operations. At present the reserve banks must keep at least 40 per cent gold and not more than 60 per cent eligible paper behind their notes.

Step Toward Easing Rules.

The Glass-Steagall act, originally passed and recently extended until March 3, 1934, to protect the free gold funds of the reserve banks by allowing the substitution of governments in the note collateral fund, is regarded as a first step in the direction of no specific collateral requirements.

Urging unqualified adoption of the emergency measure without any time limitation, Gov Meyer wrote to Representative Steagall when renewal of the law came up that:

"The Federal Reserve board feels that the congress might well consider the enactment of these provisions in permanent form with whatever safeguards may be deemed appropriate as to the exercise of authority granted them."

Experts, who argue abolition of the specific collateral requirements, point out that the outstanding reserve notes are a primary lien on all assets of the reserve banks. Therefore, they say, no specific collateral of gold or any other sort is needed.

CONN. MUTUAL LIFE'S INCREASE $32,784,000 IN 1932

President's Message

Days of New Values

These are days of new values. Years ago if men were asked to list their assets, life insurance would have been last, if included at all. Today, probably without exception it would head the list. Perplexing problems have been numerous among breadwinners, but the depression-proof soundness of life insurance has been a source of comfort to all who owned it.

During 1932 this Company paid all claims promptly. The face of the policy is, and always has been worth one hundred cents on the dollar in event of death, and this is true of the values in the policy during the lifetime of the insured. These values should be conserved and permitted to accumulate for the continued protection of dependents and for provision for old age as well.

Thousands who have experienced a decrease in principal or income will seek financial safety for their dependents by arranging with this Company for the purchase of an estate in installments, often referred to as a life insurance premium, and will have the assurance and comfort of knowing that the rate on their policies will never increase.

Following our usual precedent, we wish our friendly competitors success during 1933.

Rupert F. Fray
President.

ALL LIVE STOCK PRICES ADVANCE; SUPPLIES DROP

Hogs Rise 5 to 10 Cents; Cattle Strong.

Price trends turned higher yesterday in virtually all branches of the live stock trade when the anticipated lightening of receipts materialized. Total arrivals of cattle, calves, hogs, and sheep at 36,000 were among the smallest of the winter for mid-week and showed a decrease of 28 per cent compared with the previous Wednesday's combined receipts.

The biggest reduction was in the hog supply. However, the recovery was a modest affair and did not muster up sufficient impetus to replace much of the recent sharp losses. Gains of 5 to 10 cents were cited in the better grades of swine, while the big share of "mediums" in the offerings cashed at unchanged quotations.

The extreme top of $3.60 was paid frequently by shippers and city butchers for selected 160 to 225 pound averages, while prime 250 pound butchers sold within 10 cents of the top. All droves made an average of $3.40, which was 5 cents over the preceding day's average, but 15 cents lower than at the middle of last week.

Cattle Prices Advance.

Prices in the "upper crust" of the steer contingent ruled strong to 25 cents higher, but the proportion showing the full advance was small and cut little figure in the average of the day's business. Strength was in evidence in the medium and heavy beef steers, but only in spots were the heaviest of them any higher than on Tuesday. Yearling steers averaging 902 pounds advanced 25 cents to a top of $6.75, the United Dressed Beef company obtaining 29 head at this price for its New York trade. They were shipped alive to be slaughtered at that place.

Representatives of eastern packing concerns cleaned up the bulk of the cattle that were good enough to sell at $6.00 and above. The bulk of the total supply sold from $4.00 to $6.00, thin light steers ranging down to $3.00. Good to choice 1,300 to 1,600 pound cattle crashed from $4.25 to $5.50. Cows at $2.50 to $3.00 were slightly stronger. Calves ruled strong to 25 cents higher.

Lamb Trade Lively.

The clearance in the sheep house yesterday was the earliest in recent weeks. Prices were strong to a shade higher than the low close of the preceding day, but failed to equal the high point of Tuesday. All interests were eager for numbers coming out, with strong bids as soon as the market was officially opened.

City butchers took several loads of well finished fed western lambs at $5.40, while packers obtained the bulk of the good grades of slaughter stock around $5.25. Light yearling wethers sold up to $4.75. Old ewes were steady at $3.00 and below. Indications are that sheep receipts may remain light fo. the remainder of the week.

ILLINOIS GRAIN MEN FORECAST HIGHER PRICES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 22.—An increase in grain prices during 1933 is foreseen by stockholders and managers of the Illinois Agricultural association in convention here. The organization handles 20,000,000 bushels of the state's grain crop annually.

Earl C. Smith, president, asserted that the buying power of the farmer and the rest of the public has come down to the same level. "They will come back together," he predicted, "because one cannot go up and the other continue to stay down."

The general opinion among the men representing more than 110 elevators scattered throughout the state, favored the farm allotment plan now before congress. They agree it has some objectionable features, but believe that by reducing production it would be of benefit as an emergency measure. However, they are not optimistic over the chances for passage at this session of congress.

C. E. Huff, Chicago, president of the Farmers National Grain corporation, addressed the concluding session.

WHEAT PRICES TURN FIRM IN FOREIGN MARTS

Winnipeg and Liverpool Monopolize Trade.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

With American grain markets closed yesterday, there was little interest shown in either Winnipeg or Liverpool. Sufficient scattered seaboard and continental buying developed at Winnipeg to hold wheat prices a fraction above the finish of the previous day, with net gains of ¼ cent. May there finished at 48⅞ cents, equal to 40¾ cents in United States funds.

Firmness in Liverpool had some effect on Winnipeg. A message to J. E. Bennett & Co., however, said it was doubtful if export sales of Manitoba wheat for the day exceeded 250,000 bushels. Liverpool gained ¼ to ½ cent, with an advance of a penny in spot Manitobas and a fair continental demand was also indicated.

European Demand Forecast.

Owing to the fact that the European crops are largely of soft wheat and the Argentine grain this year is deficient in gluten, Broomhall expressed the belief there would be a continued good demand for high grade Manitobas for mixing purposes from the continent, including central Europe. Widespread rains were said to have fallen in the United provinces of India, but the drought continues in the Punjab, which is the largest producing area.

Chicago Traders Favor Buying.

Few grain traders were to be found around the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. Comment on the market was inclined to favor the buying side on the recessions, however, especially as long as there is no rain over the winter wheat belt. Coarse grains attracted little attention at Winnipeg, with oats closing unchanged; rye, ¼ to ½ cent lower and flaxseed, ⅛ to ¼ cent higher.

Legal Reserve.

Please tell me what is meant by "legal reserve" when used in connection with life insurance companies. —T. T. E.

Legal reserve life insurance premiums are payments to an insurance company that are fixed in amount during the policy period. Premiums are computed so that with all future payments made, the company will be able to meet all obligations. A reserve fund is accumulated during the early stages of the policy. This is the result of overpayments made during earlier years to cover the higher cost of providing insurance in later years.

STEEL OUTPUT SLOWS AS AUTO BUYING DROPS

Weak Price Situation Checks Orders.

Activity in the country's steel centers slowed up last week largely because of a decrease in demand from automobile companies, according to the weekly review of Iron Age. The decline in the demand from the industry as a whole was offset only partially by the increased releases of the Ford Motor company.

The journal expressed the belief that the weak price situation helped to flatten out the steel demand.

Ingot production declined a shade under 19 per cent of rated capacity as a result of the various factors affecting the demand. The journal finds the immediate outlook is still uncertain owing to the lack of a substantial volume of new building work and the almost complete absence of the railroads from the market. The indefiniteness of the automobile schedules also clouds the outlook.

STOCK CASUALTY 1932 PREMIUMS AT $730,000,000

Premiums of stock casualty companies for 1932 totaled $730,000,000, according to an estimate made yesterday by the National Underwriter, weekly insurance newspaper. This was a decline of 11 per cent from the 1931 total of $823,000,000. The paper's estimate is based on the available experience of companies writing 40 per cent of the total volume.

Stock casualty automobile premiums totaled $264,000,000 in 1932, compared with $283,550,000 in 1931, a decline of 6.9 per cent. Automobile liability accounted for $198,200,000 premiums in 1932, compared with $207,000,000 in 1931, a decrease of 4.35 per cent. Automobile property damage premiums totaled $57,250,000 in 1932, a decrease of 11 per cent. Casualty collision premiums, with a total of $9,300,000, decreased 11.8 per cent.

Compensation premiums decreased 22 per cent, showing a total of $105,800,000 in 1932, compared with $135,487,000 in 1931. Burglary premiums totaled $28,200,000 in 1932, a decrease of 13 per cent from the $32,445,000 total in 1931.

Building Contract Awards Decline Early This Month

A total of $32,209,600 is involved in construction contracts awarded in the first half of February in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains, the F. W. Dodge corporation reports. In the corresponding period last year such contracts totaled $46,458,000. January contracts for all classes of construction awarded in the 37 eastern states totaled $83,356,000, against $81,219,000 in December.

WORLD'S FIRST FUR EXCHANGE IS OPENED BY LONDON BROKERS

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The world's first fur exchange was opened today in the Beaverhall headquarters of the Hudson Bay company by Lord Mayor Sir Percy Greenaway. The ceremony was witnessed by trade representatives of countries important in the fur trade and business men.

P. Ashley Cooper, governor of the company, described the opening of the exchange as one of the most important developments in the fur trade for a long time, adding that between £12,000,000 and £13,000,000 worth of fur are handled in London yearly.

Already 120 members have been elected to the exchange.

RADIO CONCERNS ASK NEW WAVES TO REACH WORLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—Application for eleven new radio channels, each in the domestic bands, have been filed with the federal radio commission by the Radio Corporation of America and the Mackay Radio and Telegraph company.

The frequencies requested, which range from 3,275 to 5,980 kilocycles, would enable the R. C. A. to use its transmitters at Rocks Point, N. Y., to communicate with Montreal, Berlin, Amsterdam, Moscow, San Francisco, and Rome. The transmitters at New Brunswick, N. J., could communicate with Brussels and Berne, and the one at Bolinas, Cal., with New York and Honolulu.

This action on the part of the R. C. A. followed the dismissal on Feb. 15 of the company's appeal from the decision of the federal radio commission of June 7, 1929, making allocation of channels for domestic point to point service. The court order becomes effective 15 days after the decision and the commission will act on the new applications at the end of that time.

JOB FOR WORKER.

We have openings for several men who are accustomed to hard work and long hours. Preference will be given to married men who have responsibilities and can be relied upon to follow instructions. We will train such men and offer permanent work in our sales department, as habits of industry are the main requirement, not selling experience. Applicants should have clean records, indicating stability of character, also be able to prove continued employment by one or more concerns.

Men from the mechanical and building trades, whose records entitle them to the company's approval and co-operation, can start to earn money at once with the assurance that if they will follow our teaching they can in three to six months' time be earning better weekly pay than in any former employment.

Each applicant will be given a personal interview by manager. Apply Thursday morning, February 23d, between 9 and 1, at 630 Hyde Park Bank Bldg., 53d and Lake Park-av.

YOU'LL AGREE
